Brothersvalley FFA Takes Top Honors

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — The Berlin Brothersvalley FFA in southern Somerset County earned top honors at the State Farm Show recently.

The demonstration and safety teams won first place overall. Keystone Essay Kontest winner was Stephanie Hartman of Berlin's FFA.

"This is an amazing group of students who are dedicated and well rounded," said Michael Clark, a first-year agricultural teacher who has taken over for veteran teacher Doyle Paul this year. "The honors at the Farm Show made all the effort worthwhile."

The demonstration team, with members David Bittner, Stephanie Hartman, Rebekah Fox, and Jenny Fisher, traveled to the Farm Show on Jan. 7 to compete in the state contest with their presentation, entitled "Life-Saving Knowledge," which included five different CPR procedures.

Stephanie Hartman, also the Keystone Essay Kontest finalist, was also a member of the first-place demonstration team. She explained that her team went through 10 different practices, working sometimes until after 10 p.m. school nights.

"It paid off," said Hartman, a senior. "We received very high comments from Mr. Clark and from many spectators. We really wanted win for Mr. Clark. Being a first-year teacher, he had to jump into Mr. Paul's shoes. No one will ever replace Mr. Paul, but Mr. Clark has really been supportive and he's turned a lot of students around."

Hartman also won the Keystone Essay Kontest. In 1999, the state officer team introduced the Kontest as a way for Keystone Degree honorees to express in writing what earning a Keystone Degree means to them.

Michael S. Brammer, Pennsylvania FFA executive manager, wrote Hartman a letter concerning her essay. A part of RINGOES, N.J. — Plans are well under way for the New Jersey Holstein-Friesian Association (NJH-FA) to host the national convention in Atlantic City this summer.

The national convention is scheduled Sunday, June 23-Thursday, June 27 at the Taj Mahal Hotel and Casino.

"We're at full steam in all of our efforts and things are going very well for us," said national convention chairman Joe Valen, Princeton, N.J.

Valen provided updates from all planning committee activities last Saturday at the NJH-FA meeting attended by more than 50 members, families, and friends at the Amwell Valley Fire House in Ringoes, N.J.

Said Valen, "The National Holstein Convention will provide a unique opportunity for agribusiness representatives to gather with Holstein breeders from around the country in Atlantic City. More than 3,000 are expected to attend this exciting event."

The host association, based in Belvidere, N.J., has picked the theme, "New Jersey and You in 2002," adopted from the state's popular tourist slogan, to emphasize the importance of N.J. to the U.S. food-producing industry.

The national convention will

2003 Pa. Farm Show Expands To Eight Days

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On Wednesday, Gov. Mark Schweiker announced that the Pennsylvania Farm Show Commission has extended the Farm Show schedule for January 2003.

Schweiker announced next year's Pennsylvania Farm Show will be Jan. 11-18, running for eight days instead of six. He said the commission's decision to extend the Farm Show by two days was largely driven by the anticipated completion of the $76 million renovation and expansion project at the Farm Show Complex.

Schweiker participated in the historic groundbreaking Sept. 27, 2001, putting in motion the largest construction allocation ever made to Pennsylvania's agriculture.

"During the past seven years, we've worked hard to provide a 21st century infrastructure and showcase for Pennsylvania agriculture," Schweiker said. "New construction at the Farm Show Complex is leading the way in accomplishing this goal. The new Expo Center will create additional and greatly needed space for Pennsylvania farmers and agribusinesses to market even more of their products to even more customers."

Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes said the refurbished Farm Show Complex will be the largest "under roof" facility of its kind in the country. When completed, total exhibit space will increase from 660,000 to more than one million square feet.

The Farm Show Main Exhibit Hall is the largest existing venue in the complex with 145,000 square feet of exhibit space. The new Exposition Hall will more than double the main exhibit area by adding 175,000 square

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Report Supplied By USDA

Grain and soybean bids were mostly lower for the fourth consecutive day. Several CCC donation wheat purchases were reported but other commodities were Slighted. Wheat steady to 2 cents lower. Corn steady to 1 cent lower except Minneapolis 3 cents higher. Sorghum 2 cents lower. Soybeans 4 to 7 cents lower.

Slightly lower wheat bids were underpinned by crop concerns in winter wheat growing areas. Recent warm temperatures and lack of snow cover could mean damage if cold temperatures should settle back into the area.

Corn bids were pressured by continued technical selling on the Board. Additional wet weather is forecast for Southern Brazil this week. Sharp declines were noted in bean pits as spillover weakness from the past three days continued. Export demand remained slow and China talks kept a negative tone in soybean pits

THIN ICE?

Just because it's February doesn't guarantee that the ice is safe. According to a chart by the American Pulpwood Association, 2 inches of ice thickness will hold one person on foot and 3 inches is safe for a group if they go in single file. It takes 7" inches to support a passenger vehicle (2 ton gross) and 8" inches for a light truck (2 ton gross). A medium truck (3½ ton gross) needs 10 inches and a heavy truck (6 ton gross) needs 12 inches. Keep in mind that river ice is about 15 percent less strong than lake or pond ice, and that slush ice has only half the strength of blue ice. Always be on the alert for spring thaws rapidly flowing pond outlets and other open water. While you're out there on the ice, mind the dangers of the windchill factor, as well. If in doubt, stay off the ice and out of the wind!

ALL STEEL PARTS ARE POWDER COATED USING THE PBZ FIVE-STEP PROCESS.

OPINION

Foster Understanding

Last week, Lancaster Farming was privileged to attend a special Community Leaders Focus Group meeting at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

The mission: isolate the issues critical to the environmental, economic, and community impacts of dairy farms.

More than a dozen producers and agri-industry representatives attended the meeting, where the issues of farm preservation, farm-to-consumer communication, and farm economic viability were discussed.

It was a fascinating meeting. Many of the comments about the realities of dairy farming in urban or rural areas were right-on.

Before the beginning of the focus group meeting (an effort spearheaded by Dr. Greg Hanson, Penn State Department of Ag Economics and Rural Sociology), the participants were asked to list the top issues on their minds.

Lancaster Farming placed these:

- Communities often show a lack of elected officials who have any involvement in, concern about, or even general knowledge of family-based large-scale agriculture.
- There is a general lack of long-term comprehensive planning regarding nonfarm development on land in townships and boroughs throughout the state.
- Too much legislation is occurring without considering the thoughts and well-being of farmers.

What many participants agreed on:

- To truly preserve farms, we must preserve farm profitability.
- The public really would prefer open space, sometimes, and not a preserved, viable, ag security area-protected farm operation.
- Farmers must be granted the freedom to be able to make a living, even if it involves some type of nonagricultural business at the farm. But if that farm's development rights have been purchased, township or borough supervisors must carefully regulate the size and scope of that business.
- Public relations. Develop relationships with the media. Know who assigns stories to cover farm events. Make sure the reporter bringing agriculture to the consumer spotlight provides a fair, accurate, and balanced account. That's his or her job. When in doubt, call the newspaper or TV or radio station and talk to the managing editor if the coverage isn't fair and balanced.
- Be proactive. Conduct your business as if you truly care about your neighbors and your farming community.

To Prevent Poultry Respiratory Disease

Dr. Gregory Martin, regional poultry agent, reminds us that while we are in the middle of winter our attention on poultry should turn to controlling respiratory diseases. This is in part because of the balance in the need of maintaining proper room temperatures in poultry facilities with the need for fresh air to exchange with room air to help exhaust water and carbon dioxide that stems from the birds normal conversion of feed to meat and eggs. This is where the art of poultry husbandry meets science, and it is a fine line to maintain the balance.

Martin suggests that the major poultry diseases to watch for in our area are avian influenza (AI) and infectious laryngotracheitis (ILT). These two diseases are somewhat similar in their clinical appearance, yet are uniquely identified by a blood test. Each is serious enough to remind us that a good biosecurity program is a must for all poultry producers.

AI has been isolated from both domestic and wild birds. It can be carried by a bird in its digestive tract and deposited for the next bird to pick it up. Only a small (the size of a dime) amount of droppings with this virus is enough to inoculate an entire house of poultry. Additionally, the virus can be transmitted via the air just as seen with the human varieties of the flu with the virus invading the upper respiratory tract. A warm host is what is needed to keep the virus going, as it does not last long outside of birds. The strain of virus that affects birds is different from the one that causes human flu.

Routine blood testing is an important tool producers can use to manage risk. This method of surveillance aids in the control of AI as it helps identify flocks that are harboring the virus yet are not showing symptoms of the disease.

Infectious laryngotracheitis (ILT) is also an upper respiratory disease that producers must guard against. It is similar to AI in the fact that the birds show the same signs, such as coughing and gasping, and a marked drop in egg production with the disease. Birds that may recover from the sickness can be carriers, shedding the ILT virus for a long period of time. Vaccination for the disease can aid in its control.

Practicing biosecurity and good husbandry are the best methods producers can employ to control respiratory diseases. Biosecurity means taking precautions to avoid contact with any agent that may cause disease. A number of steps can be taken by producers to exclude disease.

First, limit the access to the poultry houses, including a wide perimeter surrounding the buildings. Any visitor to the poultry farm should use a gowning system that is similar to that seen in a hospital (disposable coveralls, boots, and hair cover).

Additionally producers should control access points in poultry housing against the intrusion from wild birds and rodents. These animals can be carriers of viruses. Another step is to use an "all-in-all-out" method of populating a poultry facility. Allow time for cleaning, disinfection, and downtime after the flock is shipped out. Finally, maintain optimal conditions within the house during the growth and production cycle. This would include periodic cleaning of the feed and watering systems and keeping floors as dry as possible.

If proper precautions are taken, the flock owner is providing the best possible defense against disease.

To Learn Operate Your Farm As A Business

The Lancaster Chamber Of Commerce will present a series of seminars on "The Farm Executive for The 21st Century" Feb. 5-6. Dr. Danny Klinefelter, professor and extension economist at Texas A&M University, will lead the sessions for the Chamber's ninth annual Farm Business Management School. Klinefelter specializes in agriculture finance and management development at Texas A&M University.

The first day of the Farm School on Feb. 5, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Leola Family Restaurant, will focus on top producer strategies and best practices, value-added business plans, and attributes of successful family businesses. Brent Landis of the Chamber states this segment will focus on these ideas and practices that many farmers could implement. When looking at the strategies and best practices of top producers, the most successful operators tend to be innovators. Many of their ideas and practices are drawn from things they have seen in businesses outside of agriculture and then adapted to fit their situation.

The second component will focus on evaluating producer's value-added business plans. Low margins are causing an increasing number of producers to explore ways to gain more control over the market for their products. Many value-added activities involve alliances along the value chain or group efforts such as alliances or cooperative arrangements. Unfortunately, for every effort that succeeds, another fails. This session looks at some of the issues that need to be considered ahead of time.

The last segment of the Farm School will analyze the characteristics of successful family businesses. Most commercial farms involve more than one family member and frequently multiple generations. Some of the businesses and the relationships involved thrive, others are torn apart. The businesses that are successful over time tend to be heading off potential problems by addressing causes.

The Farm School includes an Agriculture Finance Breakfast and a second day geared to FFA and 4-H students in Lancaster County. If you wish to attend, call Brent Landis promptly at (717)-397-3531.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

Unfortunately, our prediction came true.

During the fall of 2001, I predicted that milk prices paid to area dairy farmers would decline by $4 per hundredweight ($.40 per gallon) during the upcoming months. Naturally, we were hoping our prediction would be wrong.

However, when the average price paid to local dairy farmers for December's produced milk was announced at $13.72 cents per hundredweight ($1.18 per gallon), this meant the pay price had plunged $4.04 per hundredweight ($.35 per gallon) from September's pay price of $17.76 per hundredweight.

How many times have we seen whenever pay prices to dairy farmers reach a respectable level, the "powers to be" always find a way to crash the prices? This has happened over and over again.

This continued roller-coaster

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

IS GOD LISTENING?

Background Scripture:
Isaiah 65:17-25.
Devotional Reading:
Revelation 21:1-7.4-9.

When terrorists crashed two domestic airliners into New York's World Trade Center and another into the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., there were people who publicly demanded to know where God was in all of this evil tragedy. Writing to our local newspaper, a man said, "I've been praying for peace for longer than I can remember. Hasn't God been listening?"

Some people were shocked and outraged by this question, but not I. Better to honestly express our honest reactions than bury them. When people honestly take their protests to God, he can much better answer them. In Isaiah 63 and 64, the people of Israel have been asking questions such as this. Why does the Lord God of Israel remain silent?

Isaiah 65 begins with God's response to these complaints: "I was ready to be sought by those who did not ask for me; I was ready to be found by those who did not seek me. I said, 'Hear am I, hear am I.'" (65:1). It was not God who was unresponsive, but the people of Israel. He answered them, but they didn't like or heed his answer.

That isn't too difficult for us to understand is it? We, too, pray for this and that, but we do not expect any answers and so we do not hear the answers he gives us.

Prayer's Dominant Desire

One of the most influential books on prayer in my young life — and even today — was Harry Emerson Fosdick's "The Meaning of Prayer" (Association Press). Fosdick wrote a whole chapter on "Prayer As Prominent Desire."

Fifty years ago I underlined some of his most cogent arguments and still am guided by them today: "... many of the speeches addressed to God that we have called our prayers are not real prayers at all." Why? Because "They are not our dominant desires. They do not express the inward set and determination of our lives.... Prayer that is not dominant desire is too weak to achieve anything."

I am not suggesting that our prayers will be answered by the power of our words or even our desire. God is not overcome by the power of our praying. We do not persuade him to change his mind because we are so intent. But our dominant desire opens our lives so that we may receive his power. We pray about a lot of things because we feel we ought to, not because we have an overwhelming passion for this or that cause. When we do have that dominant desire we give God the opportunity to work through us.

Fosdick also said that "Men are given to complaining of unanswered prayer, but the great disasters are due to answered prayers." Isn't that what God is saying through the prophet in 65:12: "... because when I called, you did not answer, when I spoke, you did not listen, but you did what was evil in my eyes, and chose what I did not delight in" (v. 12:a,b). Israel's doing "what was evil in my eyes" is evidence not that God didn't speak, but that he did and they refused to hear him.

Anyone Else?

Someone once told a parable about a man who fell over a cliff in the dark and, after falling some distance, caught hold of a bush that broke his fall. Hanging on for dear life, the man called out: "Is there anyone up there?" Back came a voice saying, "Yes, this is God. Let go of the bush; you're close to the bottom" There was silence for a few moments until the man called out: "Uh ... Is there anyone else up there?"

For those who listen and respond to God's word, Isaiah sees a new creation by God: "For behold, I create new heavens and a new earth ... I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and be glad in my people; no more shall be heard in it the sound of weeping and the cry of distress" (65:17,19). As much as we want world peace, universal justice and the fulfillment of the destiny for which God has created us, so much more does God will it.

God has not, is not, and will not be unresponsive when his children truly seek him. "Before they call, I will answer, while they are yet speaking I will hear" (65:24). Is God listening? Yes! Are you?

ride for dairy farmers will never cease until milk is priced a different way.

Many dairy farmers had hoped that the new Farm Bill would change the method in which the value of milk at the farm would be determined. When the representatives passed their version of the Farm Bill in late 2001, we found the bill contained nothing really new to dairy farmers. Representative Bernie Sanders (I-VT) introduced legislation to amend the Farm Bill. However, when Representative Sanders' amendment failed by 27 votes, many members of the House voted against the House's Farm Bill, including many from the Northeast. The expensive Farm Bill did pass, again without any real improvement to dairy farmers.

Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT) made sincere efforts to amend the Senate's Farm Bill. Leahy's amendments would have improved the prices to dairy farmers across the U.S. The best part of Leahy's plan was that the extra money would have come from the market place, not the Federal Treasury. However, only 40 senators pledged their support to the Leahy amendments. Consequently, this lead Leahy and other senators to try another plan to help dairy farmers.

However, Leahy's plan was objected to by the majority of Republican senators (but not all). These same Republican senators tried to implement amendments to the farm bill that would not have done anything for dairy farmers. Fortunately, these amendments did not pass.

As the senate adjourned prior to Christmas, Leahy's dairy amendments were still very much alive. Unfortunately, those who opposed the amendments continued to filibuster the dairy plan.

In order to shut off a filibuster, 60 senators have to vote to close off debate. However, when only 55 senators voted to stop the filibuster, Senator Daschle decided to go no further with the Farm Bill until January.

I wonder why Pennsylvania's two senators, one more time, were on opposite sides. Senator Specter was supporting Leahy's amendments, while Senator Santorum failed to support a partial realistic solution to dairy farmer pricing inequities.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Jan. 18. Receipts this week 297,500; last week 238,900, year ago 237,300.This week's reported volume included 41 percent weighing over 600 lbs. Compared to last week, feeder steers and heifers sold weak to 3 00 lower across the nation. One exception was the Southeast, where losses were even more severe on steer and heifer calves under 500 lbs. However, in the Midwest and up through the mountain states, light calves sold steady to 2 00 higher. But for the most part, losses were clearly evident and pressure loomed over all classes of feeder cattle Heavy receipts were partly responsible for the lower market, but continued losses on feedlot closeouts were mostly to blame

Feedlot bookkeepers are starting to run low on red ink and buyers continue to try to buy cattle that are more in line with fat cattle prices National Farms of Kansas City announced plans to sell their seven feedyards with 275,000 head capacity Being one of the largest feeding enterprises in the nation, National Farms has been a major supporter of auction and direct markets across the Midwest and will be greatly missed. As the number of players who are not affiliated with a packer continues to dwindle, the future looks tough for those that are left The custom cattle feeder may have drawn the shortest straw, as customers are getting harder to find and showlists are getting harder to sell The bulk of this week's slaughter cattle had yet to be traded by Friday afternoon, but the market looks to be at least 1 00 and maybe 2 00 higher. The USDA cattle-on-feed report was very close to expectations So even though the numbers appear to be bullish, the market should not be affected Cattle on feed January 1 were pegged at 98 percent of last year's, placements were 92 percent, and December marketings were 3 percent more than a year ago

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Milk Production Growing

- December milk grows 1 percent.
- Butter stocks end year up 118 percent.
- Cheese stocks down 7 percent.
- Forecast for 2002.

The USDA Milk Production and Cold Storage reports were released this week. Let's first review the production numbers.

December milk production for 20 major states was 12 billion pounds, up 1 percent relative to a year ago. Both production per cow and cow numbers increased from November levels. Production per cow averaged 1,547 pounds, up 28 pounds over a year ago. This is the third straight month that production per cow increased.

Cow numbers were 7.74 million head in December, 10,000 head more than November 2001. This was the second month in a row that cow numbers grew.

Despite common wisdom, the nation's dairy herd is expanding very slowly despite high replacement costs. And production per cow appears to be improving modestly. This makes the forecast of a 1-2 percent growth rate for the U.S. milk supply in 2002 plausible. USDA is forecasting a milk production growth rate of 2.4 percent. This appears on the high side.

USDA's Cold Storage report indicates butter stocks ended the year well above year-ago levels, but cheese ended with lower stock levels. Butter stocks on Dec. 31, 2001 were 52.6 million pounds, up 118 percent relative to a year ago. Total stocks of cheese were 655.7 million, down 7 percent relative to a year ago.

The Chicago Mercantile Exchange is still predicting relatively strong milk prices for 2002. The market is assuming the milk supply will be much tighter than what is predicted by USDA. That said, I am generally assuming the futures market prices are a bit too high. Oh, don't worry — I have been known to be wrong before. My estimates are in the table included here.

The biggest difference between my forecasts and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange futures markets is that my forecasts for cheese prices are weaker during the spring months. Also, I am assuming that USDA will lower the CCC purchase price for nonfat dry milk from $0.90 per pound to $0.80 per pound. Therefore I am forecasting the domestic price of nonfat dry milk will fall to $0.85 per pound. My estimate of the Class IV price will therefore be lower than the Class IV futures estimate.

In comparing my 2002 numbers to USDA's, my estimate of a $12.25 per CWT average for Class III is above USDA's range of $11.25-$12.05. However, my estimate of a Class IV price average of $11.83 is within USDA's range of $11.55-$12.45 per CWT.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb butterfat. F.O B. producing plants Northeast 1 6127-1 7767 Delivered Equivalent. Atlanta 1.6400-1 7904 mostly 1.6400-1 6674.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb wet solids, F O.B. producing plants· Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9700-1.0500, Class III - spot prices - .9200-.9900.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - In 0, Out 00; last week - In 25, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 93 SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 23; last year - In 0, Out 0.

During December, milk production in the 20 major states totaled 11.97 billion pounds, up 1.0% from December 2000. The following are the December-to-December changes for selected states. New York 9%, Vermont .3%, Pennsylvania .2%, Kentucky .7%, Virginia .6%, Florida 2.4%, and Texas 4.7%. Preliminary milk production figures for the U S. during 2001 totals 165 39 billion pounds, 1 4% less than 2000

The base price for Class I milk for February 2002 is $11 95 per cwt., down $0 01 from January Class I differentials specific to each order are added to the base price to determine the Class I price The Class II skim milk price for February is $7 69, down five cents from January.

Milk production is inching higher in the northern sections of the East. More noticeable gains are reported in Florida and other Southeastern states. Bottled milk sales are mixed. In the Middle Atlantic and New England areas, a weekend snowstorm caused a rather widespread area of panic buying and bottling plants were running full out to keep pace with demand. However, by midweek, store shelves and the distribution pipelines were full and bottling dropped to almost nothing. One contact, after looking at orders, wondered why they bothered to start up on Wednesday. In the Southeast, bottled milk sales are fair at best. Florida's need for milk fell as milk output increased and handlers find themselves in a balanced position. Southeastern manufacturing plants are operating on heavier schedules, but are able to handle all the milk. Surplus milk volumes in the Northeast are again heavy after a light weekend.

The condensed skim market is little changed. Demand is fair and prices steady Offerings of wet solids are heavy and more is ending up in dryers.

The fluid cream market remains weak. Offerings are excessive and clearances to churning facilities remain heavy. Spot sales of Class II cream are rare occurrences. Lower multiples are being used to offset last week's butter price increase. Butter makers are paying lower multiples based on the CME butter market a week or so in the future Most users anticipate lower butter/cream prices and are holding off on spot purchases as long as possible.

USDA Secretary Calls On Japan To Lift Ban On U. S. Poultry

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman has called on Japan to lift a 90-day ban on U. S. poultry and poultry products.

The ban was imposed due to the confirmation of a low-pathogenic avian influenza virus in a small number of chickens in Pennsylvania.

"According to Office of International de Epizootics (OIE) standards, low pathogenic avian influenza is not a reportable disease," Veneman said in a letter, Jan. 18, to Japan Agriculture Minister Tsutomu Takebe.

"Given that OIE standards do not support a quarantine measure under these circumstances, we see no justification for this action," Veneman wrote. "I urge you to immediately remove this unnecessary import restriction."

The virus was identified by the USDA's National Veterinary Services Laboratory as a low-pathogenic form of AIV.

The state of Pennsylvania has taken aggressive actions including: depopulating the chickens to prevent any spread of this virus, inoculating its poultry, and an aggressive monitoring program to continually test birds for potential diseases.

Veneman explained that the import ban is causing serious economic damage to U.S. poultry and egg producers in many regions of the United States.

The Japanese market is important to the U.S. industry accounting for over $170 million annually.

"This measure is disturbingly similar to the action taken by your government in November 2001, which was rescinded after we demonstrated a ban was unnecessary," Veneman said. "I am troubled that, having resolved this issue only two months ago, we are now faced with another import crisis for U.S. poultry and poultry products."

Veneman added that the U.S. Department of Agriculture responded fully and immediately last week to Japanese agriculture ministry's request for information on the avian influenza outbreak. "We now expect Japan to comply with its international obligations and immediately lift the import ban," she said.

Melanie Richman, National Holstein Convention Junior Program chair, in center with red blouse, meets with committee members at the state Holstein association last week in Ringoes, N.J.

Directors and officers of the New Jersey Holstein-Friesian Association gather before the banquet last Saturday at the Amwell Valley Fire House in Ringoes, N.J. provide a "unique opportunity to showcase what we have and what we're so proud of," said Valen.

At the NJH-FA meeting last Saturday, buttons advertising the "N.J. and You" slogan, featuring a bovine beach-goer, showcases New Jersey agriculture, noted Valen, not just the Holstein association.

The national association will also include a meeting of the junior association with host chairperson Melanie Richman, Salem County.

Richman's 14 committee members were putting the final touches on plans for a wide variety of activities with juniors from around the U.S. in Atlantic City in June.

Richman said that about 300 youth from across the country will gather and participate in a wide array of activities, including Dairy Jeopardy, speech contest, Dairy Bowl, beach party (including games such as a relay, kite building, sand castle building, etc.), in addition to dance, a Great Adventure Safari Tour, a tour of the host picnic farm, Cedar Lane, Cowtown Rodeo, a national junior meeting, and luncheon. For the first time, junior members can also participate in senior meeting and show events in Atlantic City.

Plans are under way to provide some registrants to the national convention with a produce basket filled with cheese, long shelf-life milk, honey, wine, fruit, and other items. Jersey Fresh program backing may be included in plans during the national convention.

According to tours chair Richard Norz Jr., different tours are scheduled. Recreational ones include:

- Statue of Liberty/Ellis Island.
- Battleship New Jersey and the Aquatic Museum in Camden.
- A half-day tour of dolphin watching in the Atlantic and a three-hour cruise.
- Party boat fishing tour all day.
- A historic tour of the Trenton battlefields and Princeton College.

Farm and commodity tours include:

- Atlantic Blueberry, Atlantic County.
- Rutger's Blueberry-Cranberry Research Center.
- Equine horse training and Showplace Farm and Cedar Lane Farm.
- Cape May fisheries.
- Vegetable producers, including Shepherd Farms and others, along with the host association barbecue at Cedar Lane, Oldwick, N.J.

Spouse's program events include a bus trip to Cape May with lunch at the Lafayette Hotel and a walk to popular shopping areas.

According to Valen, a "dairy bar" will be established with various dairy and New Jersey-vegetable related products, including ice cream, milk, grapes, cheese, and others. Valen said volunteers are needed to staff the dairy bar and contributions from dealers and processors are urgently needed. Valen asked members to write down the dealers and processors they know, "whoever you do business with, and get me that information." Valen can be reached at (609) 896-1237.

Richard Byma, president of the NJH-FA, Sussex, N.J., spoke about plans for the national sale, which will include 75 entries and 40 for the silent auction.

"We are trying to showcase all of New Jersey," said Valen, who noted there is "so much more to New Jersey than Atlantic City."

Planning for the convention began seven years ago. The Taj Mahal can just to fit the large convention, he noted. About 55 booths were sold, and booth space was officially sold out last Saturday. Lancaster Farming plans to exhibit at and report extensively about the convention.

Sponsorships include various levels, such as Diamond, $40,000 and up; Gold, $10,000 and up; Silver, $5,000 and more; Bronze, $2,500 and more; and donors, at least $1,000.

Special technical sessions at the convention were scheduled to include the effects of nutrients on reproduction and embryo transfer, vaccines to help treat Johne's, and others.

Recognized with awards for juniors will be the champion Dairy Bowl team (last year they received $205,000 in scholarship money). At the senior level, the Outstanding Distinguished Young Breeder Award, for farm managers/owners under 40 years old, will be presented. Also, a premier breeder family will be rewarded for herd genetic accomplishments.

At last year's convention in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, about 300 visitors to the NJF-HA booth in the trade show enjoyed the theme, "Some of New Jersey's Finest," noted Valen. Last year's sale included about 1,500 people. The sale this year is scheduled Wednesday evening at the convention. A banquet will conclude the convention Thursday.

New Jersey has been noted as the "cradle" of the dairy industry. Brown Swiss were first bred in the garden state, as well as the Guernsey and Jersey.

Jersey cattle were brought into the ports, and the state was the Jersey cattle leader for many years. Valen said artificial breed-

it notes: "As we read your essay, it reminded each of us about what FFA and obtaining new goals really mean. You are correct when stating it's more than the barbecues, CDEs, and showing livestock. It is the people, other members, advisers, and all we come in contact with that make this great organization of ours so special."

Hartman's future goals include being a state FFA officer and competing at nationals in public speaking. She believes that the Berlin FFA is a thriving club because of Doyle Paul's leadership over the years and now Mr. Clark's ability to continue the program with enthusiasm.

"I never liked doing housework and I've always been a little bit of a tomboy. I love the outdoors," she said with a laugh. "I watched my brothers (Brian and Bruce) in FFA and I couldn't wait to join. FFA is family. It's comfortable and we all help each other." In addition to the demonstration team, the safety team, consisting of Becca Hittie, Luke Horning, Joe Knotts, and Blake Weigle, competed against three other teams to win the state title.

"It takes dedication but it's fun and a rewarding experience," said Becca Hittie, chairman on the safety quiz team and also the chapter's assistant reporter.

Becca said that her team practiced at least 10 hours together before the state competition. "It helps to learn how to work as a team," she said.

The safety team answer questions about farm safety as a team, much like a scholastic quiz competition. The safety team started practicing in July and competed at Ag Progress Days in August at Penn State.

"I'd do anything for FFA," said Hittie, who has plans to work in the dairy industry after her high school graduation. "It's a great club and a great experience."

Hittie said she has learned a great deal from agricultural education and hopes to become more active in FFA's parliamentary procedure.

"If it wasn't for the farmers, where would your eggs, meat and milk come from? A lot of kids don't think about that. They think it grows on the store shelf," said Hittie.

In addition to the state competitions, Berlin received honors at the 73rd annual Pennsylvania FFA Mid-Winter Convention. David Bittner, Jenny Fisher, Rebekah Fox, and Stephanie Hartman received their Keystone degrees.

Jeff and Kathy Fisher, parents of Jenny Fisher, received the honorary Keystone Degree for having three children (Brian in 1998, Becca in 1999, and Jenny in 2002) earn a Keystone Degree.

Agriculture teacher Michael Clark couldn't be happier that as a first-year teacher, his students have received high honors. Clark is originally from Perry County in central Pennsylvania and is a 2001 graduate of Penn State University. While at West Perry High School, he served as the 1996 state FFA vice president and was also a State Star Farmer.

"I am excited to be here and to be a part of the program," said Clark. "I feel good about these students and the way they represent themselves and their chapter. They are dedicated."

He explained that the safety and demonstration teams practiced for their state competitions, even over Christmas break, and were very serious about being prepared.

Although oftentimes agriculture clubs have dwindled in numbers and interest, the Berlin Chapter has grown in the past few years. At Berlin, there are 70 members, with 33 members in eighth grade alone. It is one of the biggest clubs in the high school.

"So far, it seems to be a smooth transition," said Clark, referring to the ag program going from Doyle Paul's overseeing to his own. "Mr. Paul has been here for many years and he has been a mentor to me." Clark believes that agricultural education is essential because the future productivity of the nation depends on the farmer.

"Whether we live on a farm or not, we are a part of agriculture every day and oftentimes we don't even know it," said Clark. "The population is growing and the farms are decreasing. As a teacher, I instruct students to think about what we need to do as an industry and how we need to change and at the same time provide food for everyone."

feet.

The project also includes building renovations and construction of a second multipurpose arena, a new equine center, a two-level concourse connecting all of the new construction with the existing facility, and a new parking area.

"The Farm Show Complex will be a hub of activity 12 months of the year," Hayes said. "This is good for agriculture. This is good for the friends of agriculture. We look forward to starting next year with an expanded Farm Show with more days, events, and exhibits than ever before."

Agriculture is Pennsylvania's No. 1 industry, employing more than 800,000 people and contributing $44 billion to the state's annual economy.

Holstein Association Plans

ing began in the 1940s in the state, with the New Jersey Cooperative Artificial Breeding Association.

Entrance to the convention and trade show are free, but sign-up is required by May 15. More information will be available at a later date.

Scheduled is a reception with National Holstein President Joann Hartman, Waterloo, Ill. General sessions will be conducted midweek, with the luncheon and banquet at the end of the week. The Outstanding Young Farmer Award will be presented at the general session Thursday. The banquet will be a "wrap-up" event, a chance to renew friendships.

The convention will provide attendees from around the country with message that New Jersey is "alive, vibrant, an exciting place with a healthy ag industry," said Valen, "and a fun place to visit."

The association still needs volunteers to sign up in almost every facet of the convention schedule.

But Valen assured members at the meeting last Saturday that "you are going to be really pleased from a financial standpoint that we did this," he said.

Garden State Moving Ahead With Ethanol Plans

Pa. Introduces Biofuel Bill In Senate

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

BORDENTOWN, N.J. — The final planning stages are under way for a New Jersey facility that would produce ethanol and other products from corn, according to members of the group working on the project for the past two years.

"Everything is down to the wire now," said David Fink of the Garden State Ethanol (GSE) Board, a group of farmers and agribusiness professionals from the region.

Fink, a Lehigh County farmer and member of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Commodity Committee, said the board is reviewing contractor proposals for building the plant and preparing to file with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission for permission to sell stocks to farmers who want to invest in the project.

While a site has not been selected for the facility, several prospective locations in South Jersey are under consideration and will be finalized within the next two months, according to project coordinator Ed Stahl. Permitting and construction could potentially begin on the site within a year, he said.

According to Stahl, the proposed plant would be capable of converting 11 to 14.5 million bushels of corn per year to ethanol and its "co-products" — food-grade carbon dioxide and dried distiller's grain.

Ethanol is not feasible to produce in the eastern U.S. without capitalizing on the other two products, according to board member Fink.

"The value of the co-products is actually more important than the ethanol," he said. Carbon dioxide would be marketable in the form of dry ice and in the carbonization of beverages, while dried distiller's grain is an "enhanced nutrient livestock feed."

The farmer-owned facility would be capable of producing more than 90,000 tons of dried distiller's grains and 90,000 tons of carbon dioxide per year, according to Fink's figures.

Producing ethanol in New Jersey would offer economic, agricultural, and environmental benefits as well as decreased dependency on imported oil and the gasoline additive MTBE, according to a recent GSE report.

Nationwide proponents of ethanol and other biofuels have been expressing their support for a federal Renewable Fuels Standard (RFS), as recently introduced by several bills in Congress.

Such a new RFS would would mandate the increasing use of renewable fuels in motor vehicles.

Additionally, Pennsylvania Senator Mike Waugh (R-28) recently introduced legislation calling for support of the production and use of biofuels.

If adopted, Pa. Senate Bill 1253 would mandate direct producer payments to encourage biofuel production in the state, a capital investment program to encourage the development of production facilities, an agricultural fuels tax rebate, and prohibition of MTBE.

Meanwhile, agricultural and economic development leaders from York County and the surrounding region have been exploring the possibility of ethanol production in the area.

At a Jan. 17 meeting of the Southcentral Pennsylvania Young Farmers Association, York County Ag Economic Development Specialist Scott Welsh spoke on the potential of ethanol production in southcentral Pennsylvania.

"The meeting was positive," Welsh said, estimating that about 50 farmers were in attendance.

Some who buy grain for their livestock expressed concern that a local ethanol plant would drive up corn prices.

Ethanol production, however, would provide investment opportunities for farmers rather than "directly impact corn prices," Welsh said.

A feasibility study begun late last year is still looking at a nine-county area for a possible ethanol production site. Results of the $30,000 study should be available in early March, according to Welsh.

The ethanol steering committee, originally based in York County, is expanding to include members from a wider area, including Adams, Berks, Lancaster, Lebanon, Franklin, and several Maryland counties.

According to Welsh, ethanol facilities in both New Jersey and Pennsylvania would not be detrimental to the success of either project.

"We feel the total area could sustain two plants," he said.

While ethanol production to date has mostly occurred west of the Mississippi River, plans are under way for several plants in more easterly states, including Indiana, Kentucky, Florida, and Tennessee, according to information provided by Garden State Ethanol.

Lancaster Farming's quarterly exclusive booklet, Dairy Plus, begins its 2002 season with the Feb. 23 issue, devoted to manure management issues and techniques.

Special features include managing odors, manure handling guides, and other issues important to the dairy producer. Also scheduled: cooperative news and an update on a calf cloning project, in addition to farm calendar and university columns.

Bradford County Holstein Club Conducts Annual Meeting

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

ATHENS (Bradford Co.) — An enthusiastic group of Bradford County Holstein breeders braved winter weather conditions Saturday, Jan. 19, to elect board members and review plans for the coming year.

Newly elected as directors for 2002 are Joe Kenyon, Keith Thomson, and Dean Jackson. They join continuing board members Al Calkins, Jeff Jenkins, Scot Walrath, Sandy Crawford, Dick Packard, and Linda Kisner.

Junior Pennsylvania Holstein members are also planning a busy year. As a fundraiser, junior members plan to auction themselves off to work on a farm for a day. Suggested duties include catching up on registrations, fieldwork, and barn cleanup.

Bradford County junior members are also scheduled to compete in the Pennsylvania Dairy Bowl competition. Serving on the junior team are Courtney Slater, Sierra Slater, Ben Miller, and Crystal Miller with Heidi Miller as the alternate. The senior team consists of Joshua Ford, Justin Ford, Angela Adams, and Bobby Sue Adams. The teams will compete Feb. 9 in Altoona.

In other business, the Northeast Holstein Championship Show will be Aug. 20 at the Troy Fairgrounds. Jim Burdette will officiate.

Roger Kingsley, a Bradford County Holstein member, entertained the group with a slide show featuring some of his favorite pictures. Kingsley is a field editor for Country, a national magazine. He has also had several photos published in the Hoard's Dairyman calendar and other farm publications. He also offered some tips to the group about improving their own pictures.

Quarryville To Host Grazing Conference

Innovative Producer/Marketers On Slate

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co .) — Focusing on "opportunities for small farms," a southeast Pa. grazing conference set for Feb. 11 and 12 will offer the chance to learn about grazing and marketing from those who are doing it.

Mike Hartman of Minnesota and Wilmer Newswanger, Franklin County, will discuss their experiences with on-farm processing and marketing.

David Kline, Amish farmer from Holmes County, Ohio, and author of several books, will detail the profitability of small farms.

"Bigger isn't always better" will be the first of Kline's presentations on Monday. On Tuesday, he will discuss the future of small farms and how they can stay ahead.

Billy Wayson from Virginia will take us with him on the journey from a financial planner to a small seasonal family dairy operation. He has much practical experience in thinking "outside of the box."

Jerry Brunetti from northeast Pa., back by request, will discuss how healthy soil contributes to success with grass.

A round table on direct marketing is set for Monday at 6:30 p.m. The discussion will be led by Newswanger, Hartman, and Doug Gunnick from Minnesota.

Tuesday starts with Gunnick detailing grass and portable fence management.

Art Thicke from southeastern Minnesota will talk about unconventional and low-cost methods of operating a grazing farm. In the afternoon, Brunetti will examine the basics of grass nutrition and how to supplement cows on pasture to maintain a healthy rumen and good milk flow.

Both days will allow plenty of time to ask questions and discuss with speakers various aspects of this business opportunity for small farms.

Exhibits will also be displayed related to grass and grazing.

Registration is $30.00 per person and includes lunch both days. Space is limited and early registration is encouraged.

To register, contact Arden Landis at (717) 529-6644.

New Ways To Control Pests Examined At Vegetable Day

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — About 175 local vegetable producers came out to Yoder's Restaurant Monday to learn about such topics as growing no-till pumpkins, identifying greenhouse insects, growing flowers in high tunnels, and controlling pests.

Sponsored by Eastern Lancaster County (ELANCO) School District and Penn State Cooperative Extension, the 2002 New Holland Vegetable Day updated farmers on a wide range of concerns.

Weed control is an area undergoing significant changes, according to Jeff Stoltzfus of ELANCO's Young Farmer Program and seminar coordinator.

The availability of new, more target-specific herbicides and the disappearance of some older ones demand that growers pay close attention to their program to get the best weed control.

While many of the new herbicides are "friendly to work with, almost natural products," they require more monitoring to insure they get the job done, Stoltzfus said.

Growers are also increasing their use of biological agents such as parasitic wasps to control problem insects, particularly in greenhouses.

These environmentally safe controls especially make sense in the greenhouse because of its closed environment where workers and children are often present, according to Stoltzfus.

Cathy Thomas of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture showed picture slides of a variety of greenhouse pests and monitoring techniques to help growers better identify and control them.

Being able to recognize insects and their stage of maturity as part of an integrated pest management (IPM) program helps producers "get the most effectiveness" out of their pesticide or biological control, Thomas said.

Three vegetable growers in attendance went to the other side of the microphone as a panel to tell about their experiences raising no-till pumpkins.

Charlie Miller, Gideon Stoltzfus, and David Zook have been fine-tuning their strategies over the last number of years. Persisting after some discouraging attempts, they reported generally positive results, while noting some of challenges that go along with no-tilling pumpkins.

"The longer we no-till, the better it gets," said Miller, who has been no-tilling pumpkins for about eight years in Lackawanna County.

While each grower's program differed in details from the others, each of them followed the basic strategy of planting pumpkins into a cover crop that had been killed — either by spraying, rolling, winter temperatures, or a combination of those methods.

Dr. Gerry Ghidiu of Rutgers Cooperative Extension presented the latest findings on aphid control at the New Holland Vegetable Day. One recently introduced pesticide works by shutting down the sucking mechanism of aphids and is harmless to other beneficial insects, Ghidiu said.

Rye and winter-killed oats were named as the main cover crops into which the pumpkins were sown, using adapted no-till vacuum planters.

One of challenges of no-tilling is making sure that the cover crop is thoroughly dried out before planting. Green plant material, wetness, and matting will hinder planting, according to the panel.

"Get it dead, get it down, get it dried out," Miller said.

Another no-till challenge is that the cover crop causes soil to heat up more slowly and can delay planting times.

On the other hand, cover crops hold moisture and build the soil. No-tilling decreases compaction.

A field that previously would have been a "pond" from a heavy rainfall had no water standing in it after switching to no-till, according to Zook, a New Holland area grower.

"That explained to me that with no-till, the ground was open and let the water in," Zook said.

The panel also noted that the residue mulch of the cover crop helped provide cleaner pumpkins at harvest time.

Other sessions addressed weed control in sweet corn, insect control in tomatoes, high tunnel flower production, aphid control, and the latest herbicide labeling changes.

For aphids, one recently introduced product controls these common, disease-spreading pests by shutting down the sucking mechanism they use to draw fluid from plants, according to Dr. Gerry Ghidiu of Rutgers Cooperative Extension.

The highly specific action of this "aphicide" makes it generally harmless to other, beneficial insects and relatively safe for humans, Ghidiu noted. One drawback is that the chemical acts more slowly than other alternatives.

Part of the advantage of such a target-specific aphicide, however, is that some traditional pesticides — such as those of the pyrethroid class — "increase aphid populations by killing natural predators."

"Timing is crucial" Ghidiu said, encouraging growers to monitor for aphids one to two times per week during the growing season, identify aphid types and apply specific controls, rotate aphicides, and avoid overuse of pyrethroids.

Other IPM measures to curb aphid populations include separating fields of crops susceptible to aphids, keeping fields away from hedgerows, and seeding cucurbits on reflective mulch after July 1.

Brad Majek of Rutgers Cooperative Extension said weed control in sweet corn is becoming a greater challenge because of the changing availability of herbicides and increasing triazine resistance of some weeds.

"It's getting more difficult to control both grasses and broadleafs and allow rotation to another vegetable (after harvesting sweet corn.)"

Majek outline stratagies for using currently labeled pre- and postemergence herbicides in sweet corn, paying particular attention to minimizing crop damage.

One key to crop safety when applying certain postemergence herbicides is to keep the spray from entering the whorl or contacting the top half of the plant, Majek said.

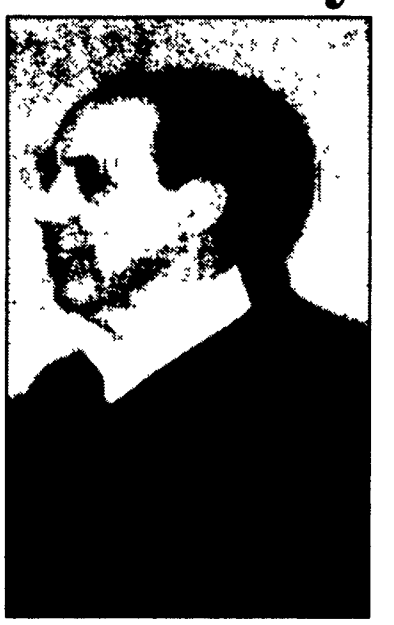
He encouraged growers to rig spray booms according to row spacing in order to reduce crop damage. For bigger corn, one option is to use a "drop nozzle" that passes along the lower parts of the corn plants while spraying.

Growers in attendance earned credits toward pesticide certification for various sessions.

Bill Troxel of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA) provided an update on the state's Vegetable Research Program and promotional activities.

Funded by Pennsylvania growers and backed by the Pa. Department of Agriculture (PDA), the research program is carried out by Penn State and other research institutions.

The PDA also teams with the PVGA in promotional initiatives such as Pennsylvania's "Simply Delicious" program, news releases that feature vegetables for printing in newspapers, and television commercials scheduled to air next year.



Bill Troxel of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association updated growers on the vegetable research program and promotional activities. One new initiative is the Vegetable Quick Bread Contest conducted for the first time at this year's Farm Show.

Farm Show Scholarship Foundation Benefit Dinner, Silent Auction Set

Champion Farm Show Beef On Menu

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The National Civil War Museum will host a benefit dinner and silent auction here Thursday, Jan. 31 to support the Pa. Farm Show Scholarship Foundation.

The Scholarship Foundation offers funds each year to selected youth who are pursuing a post-secondary education. Scholars are chosen based on their academic achievement, 4-H or FFA involvement, school activities, and a history of involvement at the Pa. Farm Show.

This year at the Farm Show, the foundation presented nine youth with $2,000 scholarships.

The benefit will begin at 6:00 p.m. with hors d'oeuvres and an available cash bar. The museum will also be open at that time.

Dinner will be served at 7:00 p.m., followed by a short program emceed by local television weatherman Chuck Rhodes.

The chef from Sysco of Central Pa. will be preparing aged steaks from the champion and reserve champion 2002 Farm Show steers for the main entre.

For those who want to see the museum, it will remain open until 11:00 pm. Tickets to the museum will be honored until July 31.

Several Harrisburg area companies helped coordinate the benefit to bring together both farm and city people who recognize the importance of education to maintain the strength of agriculture in Pennsylvania and the importance of the Farm Show to the economy of the area.

Several items have been donated for the auction, including origional art, meals at local establishments, a quilt signed by Tom Ridge, and others.

Foraging Around, the official publication of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, scheduled February 9 in Lancaster Farming, is scheduled to include a feature on rotational grazing for poultry in addition to work by other leading graziers. A preview and schedule of the upcoming Pennsylvania Forage and Grazing Conference is also scheduled, in addition to news and views of the Council.

Government Programs, Insurance, Crop Issues At Conference

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh County) — A recent crops conference conducted in several locations across Pennsylvania provided producers with the opportunity to learn about government aid, crop insurance, forage quality, and wildlife management.

By attending the sessions participants were able to earn pesticide core and category credits.

The conference, sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and nine agriculture industry sponsors, was conducted over four days in four counties. Approximately 800 producers came to the meetings.

Locations included Leesport Farmers Market, Leesport, Berks County; Days Inn Conference Center, Allentown, Lehigh County; Montgomery County 4-H Center, Creamery, Montgomery County; and East Brandywine Fire Hall, Guthriesville, Chester County.

The program included two night meetings in the Lehigh and Montgomery County locations.

In addition Allentown and Montgomery County hosted two evening meetings.

While one objective was to help producers reach certification requirements for pesticide licensing, another objective was to "provide research-based, unbiased education and the latest updates for farmers," said Mena Hautau, who helped to organize the event.

All producers who apply pesticide or herbicide must become certified by attending classes, gaining credits, and taking a test. After the test is successfully completed the license must be renewed every three years, which can be accomplished by attending meetings and gaining credits.

Government Programs For Ag

John Berry, Lehigh County extension agent, spoke about government programs for agriculture, an aspect of government that has become increasingly important to today's farmers, according to Berry.

"The last few years, government programs have been an important part of net revenue stream," he said. "These programs may have reputations as freebies or something-for-nothings. However they're not handouts but a normal business sense kind of programs."

Vivian Keesey, certified crop insurance agent, and John Berry, Lehigh County extension agent, were two instructors at a recent crops conference.

Get on the books at the Farm Service Agency (FSA), said Berry. "At least participate in FSA reports with your acreage and yield history. Then you're on their books when a new program rolls around," he said. Producers who are deemed eligible are often from FSA lists.

"I'm trying to stimulate your thinking and get you to pay attention to FSA literature and Lancaster Farming literature to look for programs coming down the road in the future."

One example of a government programs include the Dairy Market Loss Assistance program. In addition, the Debt For Nature program allows producers debt forgiveness on a percentage of debt from loans from the FSA if they develop a wetland on their property. In the past two years, a Farm Storage Loan program encouraged on-farm storage for crops.

"One of the underused features of the USDA and FSA is the nonrecourse market assistance loans and loan deficiency payments that allow producers to manage risk. Its a logical choice for marketing soybeans," he said. "The federal government feels strongly about ensuring a safety net, a baseline rate since the world soybean market tends to fluctuate."

NRCS is another government organization willing to help producers, said Berry. Dealing mostly with soil erosion and water issues, they will cost share with farmer for such ecological improvements as stream bank fencing. Also, a no-till seeder for vegetable crops is available for use free of charge.

In summary, "start a reporting history so when a new farm aid program does roll along, you'll be eligible."

He also emphasized participation in loan programs, he said, stressing that producers should be proactive rather than relying on spot disaster relief.

Crop Insurance

Vivian Keesey, a certified crop insurance agent, presented a few basic ideas about crop insurance for 2002.

During the lecture she emphasized government help in catastrophic coverage (CAT). Since the state government is encouraging farmers to purchase coverage, they are subsidizing CAT coverage, she said.

In addition to paying the administration fee for insurance, between the federal and state government, the two institutions are paying more of the insurance premium than the producer has to for crop loans.

The multiperil crop insurance (MPCI) plan is designed to protect farmers for the loss of crop production below a predetermined guarantee. A producer must insure all the acreage of the insured crop in the county in which they have a share, said Keesey. It goes by crop and by county, she said. Actuarial data must be estimated for that crop in that county, she said.

The plan covers adverse weather, fire, insects, plant diseases, wildlife damage, and failure of irrigation water supply.

The guarantee is calculated using the producers actual history — if possible, at least four years. Producers can chose their level of coverage for each crop.

"You are guaranteeing yourself a percentage of that yield, so the higher the yield the better," she said. "You pick a price per bushel you'll be paid if you have a payable loss."

The yield guarantee — how many bushels the producer is guaranteed — is the average yield multiplied by the coverage level.

Since the producer has a choice, Keesey recommended using the market price, since that price is usually higher than the established price, she said.

Other plans include the Index Income Protection, which protects against yield loss and market price decline. The plan uses price elections based on the monthly average in a pre-selected month on the Chicago Board of Trade. It also indexes the producers yield against the county's yield.

The Crops Revenue Coverage (CRC) protects against yield loss, price decline, or a combination of the two. It uses price elections based on the monthly averages of the pre-selected months on the Chicago Board of Trade. It allows for an increase in liability without increasing the premium should the fall harvest be greater than the spring base price, said Keesey.

Insurance sales closing rate for the spring planted crops is March 15.

Soybean Diseases

Eric De Wolf, department of plant pathology at Penn State, gave an update about soybean diseases.

Sclerotinia Stem Rot, or white mold, as its more commonly called, is a disease that has grayish-black stone-like structures in the stem. These structures can survive in the soil for at least seven years.

They grow and produce mushroom-like structure that produces the spores that infect the flowers of the soybean plant. The disease needs a moist, 50-degree environment to grow and produce spores. The spores can be hiding among seeds and be put into the soil, which spreads the disease.

Crop rotation, while it will not kill all the spores, will at least reduce them.

"The longer you can rotate away, say, 2-3 years to a nonhost crop, you will reduce risk," said De Wolf.

Controlling broadleaf weeds, which can be hosts, will also be helpful, along with selecting varieties of soybeans less susceptible to the disease. Producers could also adjust their row spacing to allow for air movement.

De Wolf also addressed the soybean cyst nematode, a disease that may impact Pennsylvania soybean producers in the near future. It has caused the greatest soybean losses of any pathogen in the U.S. The disease centers in the southern and midwestern U.S., but has spread as far east as Ohio.

The nematode causes a stunted and yellowed crop. However aboveground symptoms, which are similar to those of other field problems such as drainage and fertility, are not apparent until the nematode population is high.

The most reliable means of identification, besides sending a sample to a laboratory, is to dig up and massage the soil off the rootlets to look for small white-to-yellow cysts.

Juvenile nematodes penetrate the roots and feed on the veins of the developing crop.

Anything that can move soil can introduce soybean cyst nematode, he said. Crop rotation is again a method of control, along with periodic soil sampling and checking plants. Additionally, broadleaf weed control is important.

In the last two years, another pest has been introduced to the soybean crop world. The soybean aphid, once it was found in Wisconsin, was quickly identified in many other areas. The aphid spreads soybean viruses and may even cause virus interaction, where two weaker strains can intermingle and become a more formidable virus.

Keynote Speakers

Sustainable Agriculture, the new vision for the future of agriculture, is a knowledge-based approach to meeting the food and fiber needs of society that puts the people at the center.

John Ikerd

It's a distinct honor to welcome John Ikerd and his illuminating vision to Farming for the Future Ikerd will rouse and engage us with his remarks on the true relevance of sustainable agriculture today!

John comes to us from the state of Missouri, where he grew up on a dairy farm He earned BS, MS and Ph D degrees in Agricultural Economics at the University of Missouri and now holds an appointment as Professor Emeritus of Agriculture Economics

Ikerd's work emerged from a close examination of the industrial model of agriculture He remarks that, "the sustainable agriculture paradigm has emerged to solve problems created by the industrial model This new paradigm seems capable of creating benefits the industrial model is inherently incapable of creating, such as greater individual creativity, greater dignity of work, and more attention to issues of social equity"

John Ikerd is a forecaster of sorts His writings plainly demonstrate the deep social benefits of adopting sustainable agriculture practices He will convey these benefits and help us bring further definition to our declared theme, "Healthy Farms Healthy Communities Our Link to a Sustainable Future"

Cathrine Sneed

Gardening and farming provides us with life's necessities; food and fiber But look beyond the material level and we see that growing things is also about hope, nurturance and the transformation of new life out of old Our closing keynote speaker, Cathrine Sneed, brings us testimony of the powerful restorative effect of gardening and farming on the lives of people and their communities

In 1982, Cathrine established a successful horticulture program for prisoners in the San Bruno County Jail, San Francisco However, even with new skills, prisoners kept returning to jail Cathrine decided to begin a post-release program to assist former prisoners in making the transition back into society and The Garden Project was born in 1992 She sought to give people hope in their own ability for personal growth by helping them to develop a sense of purpose and connectedness Through training in organic gardening and tree care, life-skills counseling, and assistance in continuing education, former offenders are given the tools to transform their lives and reenter their communities as proud contributing members

Today The Garden Project is strong and successful Every day, participants work to harvest and deliver hundreds of pounds of organic produce to needy communities

Besides vegetables, The Garden Project grows individuals who can successfully return to their communities Please join us in hearing Cathrine share her experience in using gardening and farming to cultivate sustainable lives

Healthy Farms, Communities Focus At 11th PASA Conference

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — More farmers use more land in more healthy ways to build stronger communities.

These will be the topics featured at the 11th annual Farming for the Future Conference Feb. 8-9 in State College.

"Healthy Farms, Healthy Communities: Our Link to a Sustainable Future" is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA) at the Penn Stater Conference Center Hotel.

PASA members and guests will gather "for the sake of our farmers, our food system, our communities and our world," according to the invitation of Brian Snyder, PASA executive director. Fully 14 of the weekend's 48 workshops relate to some aspect of health — from human nutrition to compost-enriched soil to farms that heal communities.

A second strong emphasis will be farm economics, featuring a series titled "The Farmers' Own School of Family Farm Economics." Using the same budget forms, six vegetable and livestock farmers will share their personal farm financial figures — to track what works and what doesn't, and how to use careful record keeping to know the difference.

Other workshops, which will be held during five different time slots, will cover direct marketing, pasture-based production and sales, niche enterprises (fiber animals, farm B&B, microdairies), timber management for wood harvest, and reforming the agricultural economy and land-grant ag education.

Keynote speaker Dr. John Ikerd will kick-off the weekend with his refreshingly unconventional message. After serving 30 years as an agricultural economist with the Cooperative Extension Service in four states, he came to a radical conclusion from the farm crises of the 1980s. "I started to understand that a focus on the bottom line eventually destroyed the viability of the farm environmental resources and the farm family, and led to bankruptcy."

Retired now from the University of Missouri, he speaks extensively to farm groups and even urban audiences that want to understand how to build a better "food system" — the complex mix of producers, consumers and distributors who interact through economics, community values, and political policy. Rather than production-oriented efficiency, Ikerd believes the best opportunities for farming now lie in knowing a particular piece of land well and developing resilient relationships with a particular customer base. When a farmer finds how to express personal and farm uniqueness in the marketplace, it will be hard for corporate agriculture to duplicate, he said.

By shifting to diverse enterprises that use more management-intensive systems to enhance biological cycles, farmers find profit areas not offered in commodity production. He is a student of farmers who make these kinds of changes, and sees an expanding field of opportunity. "We have less than 2 percent of our population in production agriculture, and only about 1 percent are fully employed at it. What would be wrong with having 4 percent of the population farming for a living?" he asks. For more of his thoughts, check http://hometown.aol.com/jeikerd.

Offering the closing keynote at 3 p.m. Saturday will be Cathrine Sneed, founder of The Garden Project in San Francisco. A former law student, she now heads a comprehensive effort to give former inmates the personal values, job skills and community support to become positive contributors to society. She started with a jail garden in 1982 that many men enjoyed, then followed with the Garden Project a decade later. By adding reading and math, counseling and a supportive environment to horticultural excellence, the project gives the former prisoners enough advantages that more than 75 percent do not return to jail.

The Sustainable Trade Show and Marketplace will fill the center's exhibit area with companies offering the latest agricultural hardware, ag products and services. Farm and food advocacy organizations will exhibit their efforts to build new markets and educate consumers. As a convenience, vendors selling farm-fresh and ag products will be grouped together. Three of the conference meals will feature sustainably, organically, and regionally raised foods.

For details, contact PASA, 114 West Main St., P.O. Box 419, Millheim, PA 16854-0419, (814) 349-9856, fax (814) 349-9840, info@pasafarming.org. Complete details and online registration are at www.pasafarming.org.

Sponsors for the PASA Conference include Fertrell Company, Eberly Poultry Farms, Tuscarora Organic Growers, Pennsylvania Certified Organic, Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection, Penn State University, College of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Dept. of Agriculture, and Rodale Institute.

Sharon Kazary, Blackberry Ridge Farm, Md. is a former innkeeper who currently runs a vacation cottage on her farm. Introducing tourists to farming can be profitable as well as socially beneficial as it introduces guests to an agricultural lifestyle and farm values. Kazary will describe how to set up and operate a home-stay, cottage, or B&B on the farm. She has 11 years' experience in the tourism industry.

• Intro to Pricing for Direct Marketing. John Berry, Penn State Extension, Lehigh County, regional marketing specialist; Ed Herrmann, Penn State Extension, sustainable ag specialist. This lively workshop will explore how to set prices for profitability in your target market. Berry spent 20 years on a Pennsylvania dairy and forestry-products farm before obtaining his MBA. He focuses on whole-farm oriented risk management and agricultural retailing. Hermann brings years of market-farming and market development to his extension role.

• Planning Strategies for Successful Producer Co-Ops. Dick Poorbaugh, Penn State Cooperative Extension, business education and research. How farmers can benefit from pooling production, and how to manage farmer-based co-op endeavors.

• Intro to E-Commerce. Ed Herrmann, Penn State Extension, Lebanon County, sustainable ag specialist. E-business connects small- to medium-sized businesses to the Internet, electronic commerce, and global trade. This seminar will introduce farm marketers to how e-commerce can dramatically increase access to resources and expand marketing opportunities.

• Appealing to and Selling to the Urban Consumer. Rochelle Kelvin, Appalachian Natural, Md.; Virginia Phillips, Slow Food Pittsburgh, Pa.; and Bill Fuller, Big Burrito Group, Pittsburgh, Pa. Rochelle Kelvin has spent the past 10 years developing market-based initiatives to increase support for sustainably produced foods. She provides cost-shared sales representation to growers and manufacturers of organic and sustainably produced processed foods.

Phillips is a former editor and current freelance food and travel writer from Mt. Lebanon. She co-founded Slow Food Pittsburgh to support biodiversity, sustainability, and preservation of agricultural and culinary heritage.

Chef Fuller has been corporate chef at the Soba Lounge since 1997. He holds a master's degree in chemistry and has 17 years' experience in the restaurant trade. A "Chef of the Year" winner (Pittsburgh Magazine), Fuller dedicates time to developing relationships with individual farmers and the Penn's Corner Farm Alliance of PASA's Community Farm Initiative-West.

PASA Conference Workshops Related To Grazing

Sustainable Graziers Alert! Dairy, Beef, Poultry Topics Await At PASA

Pasture-based dairy, beef, and poultry operations will be featured in the 11th annual Farming for the Future Conference Feb. 8-9 in State College.

"Healthy Farms, Healthy Communities: Our Link to a Sustainable Future" is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA). Location is the Penn Stater Conference Center Hotel.

Pasture workshops include:

• After 16 Years of Grazing: Keeping It Simple Works the Best. Art Thicke, Enchanted Meadows Farm, Minn. This veteran grazier will give an overview of his 16 years in dairy grazing, stressing simplicity, diversity, longer rest periods for pastures and outwintering cattle. He will also talk about the importance of finding balance between profitability, lifestyle, and protecting the environment. He milks 85 Ayrshire cattle.

• Not Just Chicken Scratch-100 to 10,000 in Four Years. Ron and Sheila Hamilton, Armena, Alberta, will explain in two workshops how they went from producing 100 to 12,000 birds on pasture in four years. They will describe the basics of raising chickens, turkeys, ducks, geese and laying hens. Topics covered will include brooding, pasture raising, processing, health problems, weather concerns, feed programs and marketing, from fargate to white-tablecloth restaurants.

• Biodynamic, Pastured Beef: A Doctor's Comparison. Dr. John Foster, associate director of the Integrative Medical Center of the Thomas Jefferson Medical Center in Philadelphia. Dr. Foster operates a 325-acre biodynamic cattle farm in Chester County. He will make a nutritional comparison between the meat from his farm and commercial beef.

• Establishing and Managing Diverse Pasture Mixes. Matt Sanderson, USDA Ag Research, State College. Results on best mixes, best species to establish, and animal preference by species gleaned from research throughout the northeast U.S., including locations on Pennsylvania farms.

• Sustainable Pastures and Warm-Season Grasses. Jose Taracido, University of California of Pennsylvania. Focus on how grasses with higher production in mid-summer can even out grazing capacity. These grass species also provide good forage production on low-fertility, high-acidity soils and create excellent wildlife habitat in farm settings.

• Farmer-to-Farmer Learning Circle: Dairy Grazing. Free-wheeling discussion for advanced practitioners.

Glenn Moyer, of the well-known Cove Mountain Farm, Mercersburg, will be one of several presenters in the "The Farmers' Own School of Family Farm Economics: Family Livestock and Dairy Farmers Reveal Their Annual Finances." Grass-based beef, pastured poultry, and organic dairy producers will also use a common spreadsheet style to present their farm's actual economic data, providing unusual insights into budgetary details.

ARE YOUR TIESTALLS 'WORKING' FOR YOU?

Dan F. McFarland
Extension Agent — Agricultural Engineer, York

Are your cows confined to tiestalls? If so, do they struggle to rise or recline? Do they spend more time standing than they should? Do you lose first lactation cows because they don't adapt? Are stall-related injuries, such as swollen hocks, tramped teats, and/or bruises, common?

Proper dimensions, stall structure, stall bed, bedding, and management are all essential to successful stall performance. Producers that have modified their tiestalls to improve cow comfort and access to feed and water have been pleased with the results. This article will focus on the current recommendations of dimensions and structure of tiestalls for improved cow comfort and access to feed and water.

The stall design should allow each cow to rise and recline easily without contact to the surrounding structure. There should also be ample room for her to rest comfortably. For mature Holstein cows, the stall bed length (measured cow side of the front curb to the manure gutter) should be 68-70 inches. This allows ample body space (brisket to tail) for the cows to rest comfortably.

Stall length may be reduced 2-6 inches for smaller framed cows. Preferred stall divider placement is from 51-54 inches center to center, or approximately 49 to 52 inches clear, for most mature Holsteins. Stall width may be reduced 2-4 inches for smaller framed cows.

The most popular tiestall design uses a horizontal tie rail at the front of the stall to anchor the chain. Usually this rail is 30 to 36 inches from the stall surface and it extends up to 8 inches forward from the centerline of the front curb. This placement may cause some difficultly for large cows to rise and recline, but more often interferes with feed and water access. Raising the tie rail 8-12 inches (40-46 inches above the stall bed) can greatly improve access to the feed table and water bowl. Modifying existing stalls typically requires welding or clamping additional tubing to the divider.

Note that the tie chain length must also be increased when the tie rail is raised. The tie chain should allow the cows to lunge forward to rise and recline. Some producers shorten tie chains to control cow movement. Short tie chains can limit the lunging movement, making it more difficult for the cows to rise, causing them to struggle or get up front first. Most producers prefer tie chains anchored to the horizontal rail since access is more convenient when tethering cows than those anchored to the curb. Required tie chain length varies with the placement of the tie rail. One guideline is that the chain (including snap) should hang 8-10 inches from the stall bed.

The front curb of a stall should not restrict the cow's lunging ability. Recommended height is 9 inches from the resting surface. If a soft mat or rubber-filled mattress is used, be sure to allow additional depth from the top of the curb to the concrete stall base for this thickness. The cow side of the front curb should be beveled or rounded to reduce the chance of injury.

The feed table should be 2-4 inches above the resting surface. This allows for a more natural "head-down" eating posture. In some cases, after mattresses are added to the stall surface, the eating surface is below the stall surface, making it difficult for the cows to eat, often requiring them to lower themselves to their front knees.

The stall structure should not interfere with feed and water access. Often the tie rail position and the divider can restrict cows from reaching all the feed and limits access to the water bowl. Typically, raising the tie rail and/or moving it forward will improve access to both feed and water. In many cases, lowering the water bowl may allow the cows to more conveniently reach into the water bowl. Easier cow access can also reduce the splashing. In cases where structure modification doesn't improve drinking water access, a water bowl for each stall, mounted for convenient access, may be required.

Modifying the stall dividers to improve cow comfort and allow better access to feed and water can lead to improved stall acceptance, longevity, and production. How do your stalls measure up?

A meeting on designing and managing tiestall barns is scheduled from 10 a.m.-2:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 8 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center in Lancaster. For more information, call (717) 394-6851.

National Convention Takes Center Stage At NJH-FA Meeting

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

RINGOES, N.J. — National Holstein Convention planning took center stage in business matters at the annual meeting of the New Jersey Holstein-Friesian Association (NJH-FA) here last Saturday at the Amwell Valley Fire House.

More than 70 members were on hand for the banquet meeting.

The association boasts about 200 members statewide, including about 120 active and 104 juniors.

Several other items also took the limelight at the meeting.

Richard Norz Jr. discussed the 2001 state sale, which included some nice consignments. Sale date this year is April 20 at 11 a.m. at the Warren County Fairgrounds.

Last year's show was conducted in August with 150 head at the Salem County Fairgrounds, with judge Chris Hall. This year's show is on Wednesday, Aug. 21, at the Sussex County Fairgrounds. Judge is Gary Culbertson, Richfield Springs, N.Y.

Member Ken Roberts advertised the annual golf outing, scheduled June 25 at 8 a.m. at the Avalon Golf Course south of Atlantic City, with a cost of $75 per player. Businesses or individuals can buy sponsor signs for $100 a piece.

Genie Roberts presented a healthy treasurer's report. Bill Teets provided a finance report.

Plans are under way to place a history of New Jersey breeder breakthroughs and events in the national convention Souvenir booklet. The National Holstein Convention is scheduled Sunday, June 23-Thursday, June 27 at the Taj Mahal Hotel and Casino in Atlantic City.

Joe Valen, national convention chairman, noted that the planning committee is scheduled to meet every month from "now to the convention," he said, to iron out plans and update the state association on progress. Valen noted that volunteers are needed and that many more agri-industry representatives, including boards of ag, "friends and workers" can become involved in this historical event.

Valen noted the importance of working as a group and representing the state industry at the tours to show how far-reaching New Jersey agriculture has become. In a letter of August last year, Valen noted that "while we strive to improve the genetic ability of Holstein cattle to improve profit, we recognize that the strength of our organization, and indeed the future of the dairy industry, lies in the educational programs and services that we provide for our youth. Therefore, most of our time, effort, and other resources are directed to youth programs."

The national convention is a "privilege afforded to a given state organization only about every 25 years," he noted in the letter.

Valen noted that in his speech last year in Cedar Rapids, at the national convention, "Our hotel, the Taj Mahal, is a fantasyland jewel in the city of jewels," he said. "Opportunities available to visitors in New Jersey are almost too numerous to mention. Canoeing the 1.1 million-acre Pinelands Nature Preserve, or the scenic Delaware Water Gap, or hiking the trails in our state forests will expose you to the natural beauty of our state."

For more information, contact Valen at (609) 896-1237 or (732) 568-0219.

NJH-FA President Richard Byma noted that "we need to pitch in and work together" to make the national convention successful.

Elected unanimously to serve individual three-year terms were Warren Baldwin, north Jersey region; Bernie Beatty, central Jersey; and Raymond Hackett Jr., south Jersey.

Judges Sharpen Skills At Fair Convention

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Lancaster Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs and the Pennsylvania State Showmen's Association recently conducted their 90th annual convention at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, Hershey.

The four-day conference, attended by nearly 1,600 people, provided educational seminars and roundtable discussions.

Part of the convention included a Judges' School, where approximately 100 participants had the opportunity to brush up on their skills or learn more about a particular subject. Participants included "people who want to learn to judge," said Annie Clark, Whitneyville, who assisted Bev Gruber in organizing the event.

"They chose two judging categories and go to two sessions. Most of them are getting certified for the first time. They usually try to pick an area of particular interest. Subjects included vegetables; quilting and needlework; nuts, fruits, and berries; flowers; art; crocheting and knitting; photography; and crafts and ceramics.

Claudia Payne, retired from the Maryland Cooperative Extension and now a consultant, opened the day.

"I've been reading reports and watching the news and listening to experts," she said. "One of the trends that we need to be aware of is that families and individuals will stay closer to home in 2002, that they will attend places within a short drive from their home.

"2002 will be a banner year for fairs. This is the time for you to realize that you're really on track. You have a chance to plan and make sure you do have a banner year, that you take that opportunity."

Expect larger crowds, new exhibitors and increased and improved security, she said.

Payne also recommended adding educational demonstrations, such as sewing machines, in the exhibit area. In addition the judging standards should be posted or leaflets for fair-goers to take home and perhaps enter next year.

Bonny Broadt, Bloomsburg, taught the flowers course. "The hardest part is taking an exhibit out of its class," she said. Broadt recommended that stewards and assistants be well versed in the flower classes to help enter the exhibits in the correct class.

In addition helpers "are encouraged to listen to the judge's comments," she said. Stewards will probably be standing by the exhibit when the public comes to the fair, so they can answer more questions more intelligently if they have listened to the judge.

Judges should first look for contagious diseases, instincts, artificial support t and artificial flowers, she said. Also, recently-potted flowers may also be disqualified at fairs since they tend to wilt quickly, "which makes the overall show look bad," she said.

One way to begin evaluations is to first make sure the correct number of flowers are present.

"Even nicer-looking flowers will take second place to vases if they don't have the right amount of flowers," she said.

"A seed catalog is a wonderful source to learn about flowers and plants, what they should look like," she said."Use it as a reference in your own mind — it has all the pictures of what is what, and what each flower should ideally look like," she said.

Donald Jackson, Red Lion, along with Tucker Hill and Jay Book, instructed the fruits, nuts, and berries class.

"As soon as you see a nut mature and fall off the tree, pick it up and take care of it to keep anything on the ground from invading it," he said. This also keeps excess moisture from causing mold on the nut.

As for fruits, Jackson said that "to maintain high quality blueberries, do a study on fertilizer and pH needs," he said. Entries such as persimmons and pecans may also begin showing up as fair exhibits, since they can be grown here," he said.

Displays should be educational, said Jay Book, Elizabethtown. He used the example of a display showcasing collecting, shelling, and storing black walnuts that he has exhibited at fairs.

An exhibit should have a title and several points to keep the public's interest. "If we're going to have an educational exhibit be educational, we have to be concise," he said.

Book also added that fruits such as plums must be firm so that they can be displayed for the duration of the fair without becoming unappetizing. Fruit should have a consistent appearance and be without blemishes. "One should look like the other," he said.

Leaders of the class advised that judges crack the nuts to determine if there is mold inside the nut.

In the quilting and needlework class instructed by Rainy Linn, Franklin, participants evaluated stuffed animals, counted cross stitch items, dolls, pillows, quilts, and needlepoint.

They evaluated creativity, as in using printed on, rather than created, quilt patterns, in their final placings.

Fay Fulmer, Nazareth, instructor of the crocheting and knitting session, taught the participants of the class to make sure the garment is clean before judging begins. This may not only show the exhibitor's standard of excellence but may also be a clue as to the true age of the exhibit.

Also, machine knit items should be judged separately from hand knit items, said Fulmer.

"Make sure the seams are as flat as possible. Make sure there are no knots showing," she said.

In addition, an exhibit that is blocked, or carefully laid flat and stretched to dry, should take precedence in placings. "You'll know it when you see it by the way it lays," she said.

In sewn items, bands should be elastic and go back. "One thing that I'm a stickler for is colors," she said. "If you have two afghans and they're both done very well, go with the one with colors that are a little more pleasing."

Susan Hahn, Pen Argyl, was the instructor of the crafts and ceramics class.

The first consideration in the construction of any article is function, according to Hahn. What any object will be used for is the determining factor as the artist selects materials and decides on shape and color.

For example, decorations need to be in scale or proportion to the objects they decorate. Also, color should coordinate with the design.

In addition, all parts of a design should not be of equal interest but draw the eye to a highlight. Hahn's judging sheet included a checklist of: good use of design elements, creative use of material, materials appropriate for intended use, quality of workmanship, and degree of difficulty.

Tom Burke, Allentown, emphasized clarity, focal point, and emotional contact with the pictures in the art session.

Since the pieces will be displayed to the fair-goers, judges should keep in mind also the public's perception in placing the pictures, he said.

"It should be a celebration of people, really, something they can look at, enjoy, empathize with, and relate to."

A published photograph should not be the subject of a painting, said Burke.

"When you are looking at artwork, there is a formal language involved. Does this set you on a journey? Does it have a starting and an ending point? Does it make you eye go to one place?

Does it have an entrance and exit to the visual field? Does it have repetition of shapes or layers? Does it lead the eye of the viewer from one point to another?"

The piece should be consistent in perspective, said Burke. Trees close to the front of the picture, for example, should be heavier in line or color and have more detail than trees in the background.

No modulation of light and dark — shading — makes a picture become static, said Burke.

Although digital cameras are quickly gaining a foothold in the world of photography, photo manipulation cannot should not take the place of good technique and art, said Howard Hoch, Oley, instructor of the photography session.

"Work for the picture, don't play with the computer," said Hoch.

Hoch spoke about the value of timing in a picture, and of getting a unique, artistic angle to make a picture attractive, interesting, and impacting.

Hoch had participants chose their favorite photographs from a lineup and explain their opinions and placings.

Bonny Broadt, Bloomsburg, helps participants evaluate flowers during class.

Donaldson Re-Elected

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) President Guy F. Donaldson has been re-elected to a two-year term on the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) board of directors.

American Farm Bureau is the nation's largest general farm organization, representing 5.1-million members in 50 states and Puerto Rico. Donaldson will represent American Farm Bureau's northeast region, which includes the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

Donaldson was re-elected during American Farm Bureau's recent annual meeting attended by an estimated 4,000 farmers meeting Jan. 6-9 in Reno, Nev. Donaldson has served on the board since January 1998 and ran unopposed for re-election.

Donaldson was also reappointed to serve on American Farm Bureau's Executive Committee in 2002 by President Bob Stallman. The AFBF Executive Committee's responsibilities include budgeting for the organization, staff salary review, and addressing issues that need attention before the next regularly scheduled AFBF Board Meeting.

Donaldson, an Adams County fruit farmer, has served as president of PFB since April 1996. PFB is a statewide organization which provides members with information, benefits, and business services and voice in solving problems affecting farmers locally, statewide, and nationally.

Apply Now For Jersey Scholarships, Awards

LIBERTY (Tioga Co.) — Jersey youth from across Pennsylvania are eligible for numerous awards and scholarships sponsored by the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Association.

Awards will be presented to youth between the ages of nine and 19 who owned a Jersey calf, heifer or cow during 2001, at the PJCA annual meeting in Beach Lake, Wayne County, April 19-20.

The deadline to enter these contests is Feb. 8.

First-year Jersey owners can compete for the First-Year Project Award. To be eligible, a member must be between the ages of nine and 12 and be a member of an organized 4-H club. To enter the contest, submit the official project record book along with a handwritten story entitled "My First Jersey Project Year."

The PJCA will select outstanding Jersey achievers in both the junior division, ages nine to 13, and the senior category, ages 14-19. All applicants must be the owners of one or more registered Jerseys.

Entry forms for this contest are available from the youth coordinator. Five finalists from each division will be recognized at the annual meeting. Previous winners in the junior division are not allowed to re-enter the contest, while previous winners in the senior division are eligible to re-enter, but only to be considered for the state's entry to the national achievement contest.

Jersey youth of all ages are invited to compete in the scrapbook contest. Scrapbooks submitted are to include the contestants' Jersey project(s) for 2001.

Yet another contest for young Jersey owners to enter is the Youth Production Contest. Jersey juniors can nominate their registered animals that are on official DHI or DHIA test by submitting official cow records issued between January 1, 2001 and December 31, 2001. This form is required to give officials a 305-day 2X mature equivalent value for the records submitted.

The records will be ranked according to mature equivalent pounds of protein. Contestants are only allowed to submit one record per year. Top records will be forwarded to the National Jersey Youth Production Contest.

Finally, Jersey youth who are attending college or who are high school seniors planning to enroll in college within one year of high school graduation can compete for one of two $200 scholarships. Applicants must have been actively involved with Jersey cattle for at least two years. Previous scholarship winners are eligible to reapply for these awards.

To be eligible for these awards, the applicant or the applicant's family must be members of the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Association.

Applications should be sent to Patty Rassau, Youth Director, 473 Monroe Road, Sarver, PA 16055 or to David Norman, PJCA Secretary, RR 1 Box 30, Liberty, PA 16930. For more information, call Rassau at (724) 353-9681.

PENN STATE
College of Agricultural Sciences

From the Department of Dairy and Animal Science

This regular column from Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science features the research findings, student opportunities, and reports on other important topics generated in the Department. PENN STATE EQUINE PROGRAM TAKES ON A NEW FACE

Ann M. Swinker
and Pat Comerford
Penn State Extension
Horse Specialists
Department of Dairy and Animal Science

Penn State's equine program is evolving! We are excited about current projects and the future plans for the university's equine program.

Penn State has a long history of involvement with the equine, beginning with horses and mules used for construction of early university facilities, and continuing in today's programs in undergraduate education, extension, and research. The Department of Dairy and Animal Science is developing the equine program to address the needs of Pennsylvania's growing horse industry.

The department has a new equine faculty member, Dr. Ann Swinker. She began her cooperative extension/teaching appointment in July 2001. Swinker will implement and manage adult extension educational programs in equine science, teach and advise students, and assist with the new equine minor.

Swinker received her bachelor's and master's degrees from Penn State and her doctorate at West Virginia University. Swinker began her career in extension in 1975 as an agricultural county agent in Allegheny County, Pittsburgh, and worked there until 1990. From 1990 to 2001, Swinker held the position of extension horse specialist at Colorado State University.

Swinker's research activities have addressed management and environmental issues related to the horse industry, such as stable air quality, small acreage management, manure management, water quality, economic impact studies, in addition to behavior and reproductive issues. Ann's undergraduate teaching responsibilities in Colorado and Pennsylvania have included Equine Careers Identification and Preparation Course, livestock and equine events coordination, equine nutrition, and extension-related courses.

Penn State's undergraduate courses include introductory horse production and management, advanced horse production and management, horse handling and training, equine facilitated therapy, applied equine behavior, advanced judging, independent study, and special topics in equine science. Students are actively involved in production, management, and equine industry activities through foaling, breeding, and farm management projects, judging teams, internships, independent study, and other educational programs. Extracurricular activities include Block and Bridle Club and Intercollegiate Horse Show Equestrian Team. Internships are available with horse breeding and training farms, feed and pharmaceutical companies, equine publications, racetracks, and other equine industry enterprises.

Penn State has been a leader in the breeding of registered Quarter Horses and maintains a herd of approximately 35-45 horses. These horses are used for teaching, research, and extension programs. The 2-year-olds are sold each spring after completion of the handling and training course. Two stallions, The Clue Express and Lucky Zip, are standing to Penn State mares and have produced successful show and pleasure horses. A primary goal of the breeding program is to produce quality horses for Penn State programs and sale to the public.

The department's extension programs include a strong youth equine program.

Approximately 7,500 youth, thousands of volunteer leaders, and families are involved in 4-H horse programs throughout Pennsylvania. These programs are designed to develop life skills in youth and knowledge of horse production, use, and management. Activities such as clinics, camps, horse shows, and other 4-H events and competitions promote development of riding and horsemanship skills, while encouraging responsibility, self-confidence, sportsmanship, teamwork, and responsible care of project animals. Several new 4-H horse programs and resources are under development including additional references and resources for leaders and 4-H members, a horsemanship skills advancement program, a comprehensive safety education program, 4-H horse judges training, and additional hands-on clinics.

In addition, Dr. Ed Jedrzejewski, DVM, became the assistant horse farm manager in July 2001 and Dr. Nancy Diehl, VMD, joined the faculty in August 2000 as assistant professor of equine science. Jedrzejewski assists with daily management of the horse farm, including management and care of horses, supervision of students, and assistance with classes. Diehl coordinates the undergraduate equine teaching program, advises students, conducts research focused primarily on equine behavior, and is the faculty coordinator for the farm unit.

These new members join Brian Egan, equine extension assistant and Pat Comerford, extension horse specialist, all of which have worked with the Penn State horse program for many years.

We have a search ongoing to hire a new horse farm manager. Egan coordinates, conducts, and assists with youth and adult extension activities, teaches the horse-handling course, and coaches the horse judging teams. Comerford provides leadership for the Pennsylvania 4-H horse program, develops educational resources, coordinates youth activities, assists with classes, and advises students.

Penn State's Equine Team will provide strength to the university's horse educational extension, teaching, and research programs. We look forward to providing additional opportunities for students, assessing equine industry needs, and strengthening Penn State's ties with the equine industry.

Dairy Alliance Offers DHIA Information Analysis Training

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State Dairy Alliance is accepting reservations for its 2002 DHIA Information Analysis Training for professionals serving Pennsylvania dairy producers.

The goals of this program are to 1) improve participants understanding of the key indicators of herd performance, 2) teach participants how to interpret paper DHIA reports using the key performance indicators, and 3) improve participants skills in analyzing DHIA records through the use of various computer information systems.

As a result of participating in this program, industry professionals will be better equipped to assist producers in the use and interpretation of the production information systems on their farms.

Last summer professionals from several companies participated in the pilot series of day-long sessions in which they received training in DHIA records analysis and hands on training in the use of PCDART or Dairy Comp 305 to troubleshoot herd performance problems.

According to Dave Zimmerman, district sales manager of Genex/CRI, "The basic information analysis and the advanced PCDART training sessions have been extremely popular with and much appreciated by our field staff. The structure of the training sessions provides our field staff the opportunity to network and team up with professionals from other agribusinesses."

Zimmerman said, "This training has provided the members of our field staff with a better understanding of management issues facing our customers and how information systems can be used to analyze the reproduction, genetic, and production performance of their herds. In doing so, we can help them address problems early, which assures them of future success."

According to Dairy Alliance Information Management Specialist Brad Hilty, the objective of the program to "enhance the use of information systems and the exchange of ideas for improving herd performance between dairy producers and their advisors". According to Hilty, "If every adviser that visits the farm is equipped with the skills to spot potential problems before they develop further, and is able to show the producer the economic benefits of correcting the situation, Pennsylvania producers will become more competitive. Our dairy industry will get stronger and continue to grow."

Dates and locations are listed on the Dairy Alliance Website, www.dairyalliance.org. Cost is $95 per individual per session. A discounted cost of $225 for three sessions is available for individuals wishing to attend multiple sessions. Individuals or companies interested in registering for the 2002 sessions, or agribusinesses interested in training for their field staff, should contact Tammy Perkins at (888) 373-PADA.

Lancaster Farming's quarterly exclusive booklet, Dairy Plus, begins its 2002 season with the Feb. 23 issue, devoted to manure management issues and techniques.

Special features include managing odors, manure handling guides, and other issues important to the dairy producer. Also scheduled: cooperative news and an update on a calf cloning project, in addition to farm calendar and university columns.

LEADER HEIGHTS (York Co.) — When George and Roger Perry purchased bottling equipment and opened their bottling plant in 1963, they could not see the varieties of milk, ice cream, and even the farm market that would follow in the years to come.

Today George's sons Greg, Tom, and Chip, however, are grateful for the brothers' enterprising move. The farm, bottling business, and farm market now support the entirety of the Perry family, which has grown to include Greg's wife Laurie and Tom's wife Donna, plus the children that have joined the family.

While Tom takes care of the bottling plant, Greg supervises the milk and crop production, and Chip works on the store and paperwork facet of the business. In addition two full-time herdsmen help milk the 150 cows and replacement heifers.

The Perrys own 170 acres and rent an additional 300 acres for the feed corn and hay production.

"Roger came home from college in the late 1950s and realized that he wouldn't be able to make money on the traditional methods, so he decided to come up with a way to stay on the farm," said Tom Perry.

"He consulted three or four nearby juggers and decided that selling milk directly to the public was the way to make money," he said. "It has proven to be the best way to keep the family on the farm." The original price was 75 cents a gallon.

"This farm basically supports five families, which is pretty unheard of," said Donna. "We have a very good location here. It's built up all around and we're close to the expressway. Word-of-mouth has pretty much advertised this place for more than 30 years."

Diversity

"Producers have to be able to diversify," said Perry. "You can make money on a small herd, but we wanted to be able to carry over to other generations and all make money on the same farm.

"We're lucky because we got started early and have the bigger, more traditional equipment," said Perry, noting that other producers beginning their own jugging operation could perhaps start their own jugging operation with the mini-dairy equipment. A mini dairy may, unfortunately, supress growth of the business because of the limits of the smaller equipment.

The mini dairy equipment, said Perry, has spurred a resurgence of interest in on-farm jugging. Producers from Pennsylvania and Maryland, and even as far away as Nebraska, have come to Perrydell to observe the operation.

The milk comes straight from the parlor into the store area raw, where it is processed. Although the store uses most of the milk, the surplus is picked up two to three times a week.

Expansion Options

Flavored milk or growth in the ice cream facets are possible expansion opportunities. "Ice cream has become pretty big," said Perry. The cream is shipped off the farm to be returned as ice cream.

"We're planning to focus on ice cream sales — to make a more parklike atmosphere and add a walk-up window," he said. Customers come to Perrydell for ice cream because they enjoy coming to the farm and appreciate the relaxing atmosphere, say the Perrys. The calves that are housed in hutches nearby are also a draw.

"We're thinking about adding walking trails to people can come and spend a little time," said Donna. Plans include planting trees, adding a split rail fence, and trees to the area.

Milk, however, is the main reason people stop, according to Perry. "Except, perhaps, in summer for ice cream," said Donna.

The country store, remodeled and expanded in 1994, a refinished version of the 1963 store, is almost outgrown already. In addition, "I'd like to get new bottling equipment to speed things up," said Perry.

Expansion, however, will be thoroughly researched. "We don't want to get too big and lose the small-store feel," said Donna. "We want to grow but remain a country store."

The milk comes in whole, two percent, skim, and chocolate varieties. The family also delivers their milk to other nearby small stores. The unique, heavy plastic returnable bottles are also a selling point, believe the Perrys.

The store has 26 employees, most of them part-time help except for a full-time manager.

Opening The Farm

Besides hosting farm tours for the general community, the Perrys often take 4-H dairy clubs through the operation.

A fall festival this year also drew the public to the operation. "We saw big results after that," said Perry. A small newspaper advertisement about the event drew over 1,000 people to the food, crafts, straw maze, and farm tours.

In addition to being a popular ice cream destination for children, the farm hosts school tour in the spring several times a week.

"It gives them a picture of production-to-processing," said Perry.

Northeast Order Uniform Price Announced For December

BOSTON, Mass. — Erik F. Rasmussen, market administrator for the Northeast Marketing Area, has announced that the statistical uniform price paid by milk dealers (handlers) regulated under the Northeast Order for December 2001 is $13.72 per hundredweight ($1.18 per gallon) for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, Mass. (Boston). The December statistical uniform price is $13.62 for delivery to plants in New York, N.Y., and $13.52 for delivery to plants in Philadelphia.

The statistical uniform price is the benchmark minimum producer blend price paid to dairy farmers, prior to allowable deductions, for milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids. The price received by an individual dairy farmer will vary as the component composition of a farm's milk differs from the established benchmarks and by the location of the plant(s) to which the farm's milk is delivered.

Rasmussen also stated that the producer price differential (PPD) for November is $1.92 per hundredweight for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, Mass. The PPD represents each producer's share of the value generated by the marketwide pool on a hundredweight basis. The PPD, which is added to the payment producers receive for their milk's components, is adjusted for the location of the receiving plant. The statistical uniform price and PPD decrease by scheduled amounts the more distant the plant receiving producer milk is from Suffolk County, Mass.

The Class prices for milk pooled in November are as follows: Class I, $15.23 (Suffolk County, Mass.); Class II, $12.61; Class III, $11.80; and Class IV, $11.79. Comparable prices for December 2000 were: Class I $15.38, Class II $13.97, Class III $9.37, and Class IV price $13.27. The component values for December are protein, $1.9782 per pound; butterfat, $1.4322 per pound; other solids, $0.1517 per pound; and nonfat solids, $0.7799 per pound.

Milk receipts from producers totaled 2.078 billion pounds. Class I utilization, milk processed as beverage milk, was 43.8 percent of producer milk receipts. The average Class I utilization was 47.9 percent in December 2000.

The manufacture of Class II products such as cream, ice cream, yogurt, and cottage cheese utilized 15.3 percent of producer milk. Milk used to manufacture Class III products such as cheese (American and Italian) and evaporated and condensed products utilized 29.3 percent of total milk receipts. Class IV usage (butter, nonfat and whole milk powder) equaled 11.6 percent of the total.

New Extension Program Offers Vegetable School

CHAMBERSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Market gardening and larger vegetable production systems can offer good opportunities to add substantially to a farm's bottom line.

Penn State Cooperative Extension has organized a two-day vegetable production school targeted to those seeking to get started in this rapidly expanding field.

This two-day program will cover all of the major issues related to commercial vegetable production in a concise, fast-paced format.

Topics will include: Growing Systems, Marketing, Season Extension, Irrigation, Weed Control, Pest Management, Post-Harvest Handling, Crop Scheduling and much more.

New growers, new hires, and those interested in starting a produce operation are encouraged to attend this program.

Vegetable School will be conducted Feb. 12 and 13, at the Cumberland County Cooperative Extension office in Carlisle. This facility is convenient to the PA Turnpike (Rt. 76), Rt. 81 and numerous motels.

Cost of the program is $95 and includes all handout materials, lunches, and break snacks. Preregistration is required by Feb. 5. For more information or registration brochures, contact Steve Bogash at (717) 263-9226.

Pennsylvania Milk Production Down Just Under 1 Percent In November

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Milk production in Pennsylvania during November 2001 totaled 870 million pounds, down 0.9 percent from last year's production, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS).

The number of milk cows in the state during the month averaged 596,000 head, unchanged from October and 10,000 less than November 2000.

UD To Construct Poultry, Environmental Research Facility

NEWARK, Del. — The University of Delaware will break ground in spring on a state-of-the-art poultry research and demonstration house at the Research and Education Center (REC) on Route 9 in Georgetown.

The new facility will help poultry researchers identify new ways to enhance litter quality, improve in-house air quality and reduce odors and dust emitted from poultry houses. Another goal is to demonstrate best management practices on and around a working poultry house. Completion of the 6,000-capacity broiler facility is expected by early spring.

The 4,674-square-foot building will be constructed on an elevation to facilitate water drainage into the wetlands designed by the Natural Resource and Conservation Service for an area next to the poultry house. Not only will the wetlands provide wildlife habitat, but trees planted around the perimeter of the site will serve to demonstrate the effectiveness of tree barriers to nutrient runoff into filter surface water and groundwater. The trees also will help to show that tree buffers also reduce noise, odor, feathers, dust and ammonia emitted from production poultry houses.

Jones-Hamilton Co.-PLT Division, a litter-amendment company, will provide partial funding for construction and the state of Delaware will equip and instrument the facility.

"Two years ago Jones-Hamilton approached the university about a possible poultry research and demonstration house for environmental quality studies," says Bud Malone, Cooperative Extension specialist for poultry. "Both the university and the company will use the facility for research. UD scientists also will collaborate with Jones-Hamilton on some aspects of company research.

"This cooperative effort with UD complements our ongoing training and research programs on topics of current and future interest to the poultry industry," says Dr. Bernie Murphy, general manager of the Jones-Hamilton Company, PLT Division, the first company to develop a litter amendment program for the poultry industry.

"An exciting aspect of the new facility is its educational component. Students from the Del Tech Poultry Program and other high school students will be invited to participate in managing the high-tech poultry house," Malone says. "Using a remote computer-controlled system, students, from their classrooms, will be able to monitor air quality, temperature, humidity, carbon dioxide and ammonia in the facility."

National Gelbvieh Show Sees Quality Entries

DENVER, Colo. — The 2002 National Gelbvieh Show went in the books as a show with exceptional quality deep into each class. Dr. Scott Schaake of Westmoreland, Kan., evaluated 200 plus entries at this year's National Gelbvieh Show. "I have been extremely impressed with the quality of the entries and commend Gelbvieh breeders for the job they are doing," said Judge Schaake.

Taking home the National Champion Female banner for Eagle Pass Ranch of Highmore, S.D., was EGL Farah L003 ET, a February 22, 2001, daughter of SLC Freedom out of EGL Phoebe G374. This outstanding mating of Freedom x Phoebe produced three division champions, a reserve division champion and the Reserve National Champion Bull & Breeder's Choice Bull Futurity Champion. EGL Fosters L017 ET first won the Division I Champion Bull honors before winning the Reserve National Champion Bull honors. Fosters is a March 2, 2001, calf and earned the most votes in the Breeder's Choice Bull Futurity to earn a $35,000 paycheck.

The Reserve National Champion Female honors went to TWA Annie Ashley 02K, a September 2000 daughter of SLC Freedom. Annie Ashley is owned by Twin Ash Farm, Lexington, Ky.; Eagle Pass Ranch, Highmore, S.D.; and Jumping Cow Gelbvieh, Ramah, Colo. Annie Ashley also won the AGA Ring of Gold Show Heifer of the Year award. Pembrook Cattle Company of Oklahoma exhibited this tremendous female throughout the year. Pembrook also exhibited the AGA Ring of Gold Show Bull of the Year. ALS Freedoms Reflection, owned by Jordan Farms of Kentucky, earned the most points at designated shows since February of 2001. The National Gelbvieh Show was the last point show of the year.

The National Champion Bull honors went to JRI Extra Exposure 285L71, owned and exhibited by Judd Ranch, Inc., of Pomona, Kan. This exceptional February 18, 2001, son of FHG Flying H Extra 150D earned high marks from the judge for his perfect phenotype, depth of rib, strong set of feet and legs, as well as outstanding eye appeal.

Eagle Pass Ranch of Highmore, S.D., earned the Premier Breeder and Premier Exhibitor honors for the 2002 National Gelbvieh Show. Named Co-Herdsman of the Year by their Gelbvieh peers were Travis and Beth Pembrook of Pembrook Cattle Company in Fairview, Okla., and Chris Effling of Eagle Pass Ranch.

In the National Western Stock Show Junior Gelbvieh Heifer Show, CIRS Joy 29K took Champion honors for Kaycie Shearer of Canton, Kan. This March 12, 2000, daughter of DMG DI Geronimo 100H has won many awards for the Shearer family this past summer. Taking Reserve Champion honors was JBOB Let Freedom Reign 3429K. Chris Tyndal of Athens, Ga., owns this stylish September 3, 2000, daughter of SLC Freedom 178F ET out of one of J-Bob Farms' strongest cow families.

The Breeder's Choice Gelbvieh Bull Futurity once again featured some of the breed's best young sires. The Breeder's Choice Futurity allows the 62 members of the Futurity to vote for their three favorites. The top three finalists are based on the number of points earned from Futurity members' votes. Eagle Pass Ranch earned the Champion slot with EGL Fosters L017 ET. Taking the runner-up positions were the National Champion Bull, JRI Extra Exposure 285L71 from Judd Ranch of Kansas, and the Division III Champion, XXB Titus 880K from Boehler Gelbvieh of Orleans, Neb. Titus is a December 28, 2000 son of MRCO New Direction 905J.

Gelbvieh Honors Member Of The Year, Hall Of Fame Inductees

DENVER, Colo. — Each year the American Gelbvieh Association honors those who laid the solid foundation for the American Gelbvieh Association and those who continue to help Gelbvieh grow.

The AGA Hall of Fame Award honors a pioneer in the Gelbvieh breed that made a lasting contribution. The 2002 AGA Hall of Fame inductees were Fred and Lee Kummerfeld of Santa Clarita, Calif., and formerly of the 101 Ranch of Moorcroft, Wyo. The Kummerfelds were honored during the AGA National Convention in Denver.

The Kummerfelds were actively involved in the early years of the American Gelbvieh Association. Kummerfelds 101 Ranch raised some of the great bulls and females in the Gelbvieh breed. They promoted the new breed through exhibiting at many state fairs and regional farm shows. Lee Kummerfeld helped to organize the American Gelbvieh Junior Association and assisted in hosting many national junior shows.

The Kummerfelds were forced to leave their ranch in 1993 due to failing health caused by an unknown source on the ranch. They left behind a long history in the cattle industry and their contributions to the Gelbvieh breed were not forgotten.

The AGA Member of the Year nominees come from state or regional associations to honor an AGA member they feel has gone above and beyond the call of duty. Rick Soelzer of Piedmont, S.D., earned the AGA Member of the Year award and was honored at a luncheon during the AGA National Convention in Denver.

Rick Soelzer, along with his wife Colleen, owns and operates Piedmont Valley Gelbvieh in western South Dakota. The South Dakota Gelbvieh Association nominated Soelzer as AGA Member of the Year. Soelzer has served on many state and national committees and served as AGA President in 1998.

The South Dakota Gelbvieh Association nominated Soelzer to honor his leadership in hosting the 2001 AGJA Black Hills Gold Classic in Rapid City, S.D. As the planning committee member closest to the host site, Soelzer took on additional responsibility to coordinate sponsorships, work with the Central States Fair staff and arrange many other details.

2002 Gelbvieh Sire Summary Available

WESTMINSTER, Colo. — The 2002 American Gelbvieh Association Sire Summary is now available to commercial and seedstock cattle producers. This year's summary contains 1,136 Progeny Tested sires and 665 Genetic Indicator sires. The University of Georgia completes the Gelbvieh National Cattle Evaluation twice per year.

New to this year's sire summary are two EPDs recently unveiled by the American Gelbvieh Association. The Grid Merit EPD assigns a value to the carcass traits that a sire passes to his progeny.

With the Grid Merit EPD, performance is measured in a dollar value associated with marketing progeny on a value-based grid. The Stayability EPD is a prediction of the ability of a cow to produce a calf after the age of six. Longevity in a cowherd is key to covering the costs associated with developing females and adding them to your herd. Stayablity is the best indicator currently available for measuring reproductive performance.

The American Gelbvieh Association has required performance data on all registered animals for the last 30 years. In the past five years, the AGA's performance record database has nearly doubled. The AGA has also lead the way in calculating new EPDs on important traits like calving ease and gestation length.

The number of sires with carcass EPDs has increased through the Sire Carcass Test Program, a structured progeny evaluation. This program provides free semen to commercial cowherds willing to collect and report carcass data. For more information on this program contact the AGA office at 30⅞65-2333.

Contact the AGA today to receive your free copy of the 2002 Gelbvieh Sire Summary or find all animals in the AGA database on the AGA website at www.gelbvieh.org . The website features a convenient searchable format to sort sires by set parameters. For more information on the Gelbvieh breed and its programs, call 30⅞65-2333 or visit the AGA website.

"We're excited about offering this truly unique registration number at auction for any member to purchase," says John Crouch, interim executive vice president for the American Angus Association. "Not only does reaching registration number 14 million represent a milestone for the breed, the proceeds from the sale of the number will help provide more opportunities for our Angus youth."

Farm Service Agency Provides Loans For Socially Disadvantaged Persons

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) can make and guarantee loans to socially disadvantaged applicants to buy and operate family-size farms and ranches. Funds specifically for these loans are reserved each year.

A socially disadvantaged farmer is one of a group whose members have been subjected to racial, ethnic, or gender prejudice because of their identity as members of the group without regard to their individual qualities. For purposes of this program, socially disadvantaged groups are women, African Americans, American Indians and Alaskan Natives, Hispanics, and Asians and Pacific Islanders.

Direct loans are made to applicants by FSA and include both farm operating and farm ownership loans.

Guaranteed loans also may be made for ownership or operating purposes, and may be made by any lending institution subject to Federal or State supervision (banks, savings and loans, insurance companies and units of the Farm Credit system). Typically, FSA guarantees 90 or 95 percent of a loan against any loss that might be incurred if the loan fails.

Farm ownership loan funds may be used to purchase or enlarge a farm, purchase easements or rights of way needed in the farm's operation, erect or improve buildings such as a dwelling or barn, promote soil and water conservation and development, and pay closing costs.

Farm operating loan funds may be used to purchase livestock, poultry, farm and home equipment, feed, seed, fuel, fertilizer, chemicals, hail and other crop insurance, food, clothing, medical care, and hired labor. Funds also may be used to install or improve water systems for home use, livestock or irrigation, and other improvements.

Individuals, partnerships, joint operations, corporations, and cooperatives primarily and directly engaged in farming and ranching on family-size operations may apply. A family-size farm is considered to be one that a family can operate and manage itself.

In addition to being members of a socially disadvantaged group, individual applicants under this program must meet all requirements for FSA's regular farm loan program assistance. To be eligible, an applicant must, among other requirements:

- Have a satisfactory history of meeting credit obligations;
- Have sufficient education, training, or at least one year's experience in managing or operating a farm or ranch within the last five years for an operating loan, or, for an ownership loan, have three years experience in operating a farm or ranch;
- Be a citizen of the U.S. (or a legal resident alien);
- Be unable to obtain credit elsewhere at reasonable rates and terms to meet actual needs;
- Possess the legal capacity to incur the obligations of the loan.

In the case of corporations, cooperatives, joint operations, or partnerships, the stockholders, members, or partners holding a majority interest must meet these same eligibility requirements. The borrowing entity must be authorized to operate a farm or ranch in the state where the actual operation is located. In addition, the entity must be owned by U.S. citizens or legal resident aliens, and the socially disadvantaged members must hold a majority interest in the entity.

If the individuals holding a majority interest in the entity are related by blood or marriage, at least one stockholder, member, or partner must operate the family farm or ranch. If they are not related by blood or marriage, those holding a majority interest must operate the farm or ranch.

Repayment terms for direct operating loans depend on the collateral securing the loan and usually run from one to seven years. Repayment terms for direct ownership loans can be as long as 40 years. Guaranteed loan terms are set by the lender.

- Interest rates for guaranteed loans are established by the lender.
- Guaranteed loan applications are made with the lender. In cases where a lender is not known to an applicant, personnel at the county offices will help find one and will help with an application, either for a direct loan or a guaranteed loan.

Persons who think they might be eligible are urged to contact their Farm Service Agency County Office.

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — More than 100 board members, Foundation friends, and local dignitaries gathered for the 38th annual meeting of the Farm and Home Foundation here at the Farm and Home Center Tuesday evening.

Board member Bob Kindig gave the report of the nominating committee.

Five members joined, and two members were re-elected to the 21-member board of directors. New members include Karl Hess, Herb Kreider, Darlene Kreider, Robert E. Martin, and Michele Rodgers. John Moose and Alan Strock were re-elected.

The board meets every other month throughout the year to oversee the activities and organizations of the building. Members discuss and vote about any decision made about the building.

President Luke Brubaker highlighted the improvements and changes in the building over the past year. An office area will be available downstairs as a current organization moves out, he said.

At left is Fay Miller, Lancaster, who was honored for her almost four years of service as building manager at the banquet. Linda Armstrong, Lancaster, is now the building manager.

In addition several offices are undergoing renovation. The conference room will be moved downstairs as the current conference room is made into offices.

Leon Ressler, Lancaster County extension director, gave a report from the scholarship committee. This year six $1,000 scholarships were awarded from the Esbenshade Trust Fund.

These scholarships can be extended for three addit onal years if the students continue to meet set criteria. To date 396 scholarship winners have a total of $336,300 of awarded money.

In addition to the six new winners, this year the committee awarded extensions to 16 previous scholarship winners.

According to Ressler applications for 2002 will soon be mailed out to guidance counselors and teachers across the county.

Also during the evening Fay Miller, Lancaster, was honored for her almost four years of service as building manager at the banquet. Linda Armstrong, Lancaster, is now the building manager.

Additionally Luke Brubaker, Mount Joy, will be succeeded by John Moose, Lititz, as president as Moose begins serving as president for 2002.

Brubaker provided a slide presentation of a recent trip to the Ukraine for Citizens Network for Foreign Affairs, a nonpartisan, nonprofit group working to stimulate economic growth in developing countries.

"My job was to help the Ukrainians rebuild, rethink, cooperate, and believe in themselves again," he said.

Brubaker's specific mission was to help build cooperatives and aid in cooperation between the farmers and government, he said. During his stay he visited farms, conducted seminars, made recommendations, and built business plans for farms.

A small farm cooperative hosted him for the first leg of his three-week trip. Brubaker helped them to distinguish that they were not a collective farm but farmers joined together in a cooperative.

He showed the audience slides of the antiquated farming equip-

Calf, Heifer Management Workshop Set

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) and WASHINGTON BORO (Lancaster Co.) — Raising replacement heifers successfully is highly dependent on getting every heifer calf off to a great start.

The Penn State Cooperative Extension Capitol Region Dairy Team recognizes the importance of calf and heifer management and has coordinated two on-farm and hands-on programs that can help you or your employees to improve the calf and heifer program on your farm.

Mason Dixon Dairy Farm in Gettysburg will host the first program Feb. 5, and Rohrer Dairy Farms in Washington Boro will host the second program on Feb. 6. The program at each farm will be the same and includes presentations, demonstrations, hands-on learning opportunities, and a tour of the host farm. They will begin at 9:30 a.m. and end at 3 p.m.

Dr. Jud Heinrichs will lead a discussion and presentation about improving colostrum management. Participants are encouraged to bring along at least one sample of colostrum from their farm. They will have the opportunity to learn about differences in colostrum quality and actually have a chance to measure the quality of their colostrum.

Dan McFarland, ag engineering agent, will present information about calf and heifer facilities. He will address key issues related to facility needs, requirements, and management. In addition, he will lead a discussion and tour of the host farm's calf and heifer facilities.

Vinton Smith, dairy management agent, will introduce calf and heifer management protocols and standard operating procedures (SOPs). SOPs can help you and your employees to improve the quality of routine care they provide to your calves.

Additional topics during the on-farm programs will include biosecurity, vaccination protocols, milk replacer, calf starter, rumen development, and Calf-Track, a new calf health monitoring program being developed by Heinrichs. The program will end with a discussion about "Where do you go from here?" and "How can you apply the concepts and practices discussed during the day on your farm?"

These programs will be helpful to both large and small farms. Owners, managers, or employees of dairy farms are encouraged to attend. Cost of the programs is $35 and includes lunch and materials. For more information about this program or to register, call customer service at Penn State Cooperative Extension in York County at (717) 840-7408 or e-mail vsmith@psu.edu.

Frank Long Is Pa.'s 2002 Fairperson Of The Year

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs (PSACF) has recently honored Frank Long, Tyrone, with the "Fairperson of the Year" award at their recent convention in Hershey.

The director of Sinking Valley Fair for 25 years, Long helped oversee the move from leasing a small lot to a present 15-acre site. Sinking Valley's farm show now owns six permanent buildings, tractor pull track, large show ring, tent area, parking for 1,000 cars and a permanent lease for an additional 30 acres, taking the fair from Class E to Class A.

"His consistent desire for details and working with each committee has resulted in a fair ground that is attractive for year round use," said Jack DeMuth, treasurer of the Sinking Valley farm show.

Long has served as president of the Sinking Valley Fair for 17 years.

Frank Long, Tyrone, recently received the "Fairperson of the Year" for 2002 at the PSACF Convention in Hershey.

Frank is a consistent attender of the PSACF convention. In addition he has perfect attendance at the International Association of Fairs and Exhibitions. Long and his wife, Sarah Jane, have attended 100 fairs throughout the eastern U.S. and have visited fairs and expositions in foreign countries as well.

Long has been elected to the state executive committee for 16 years. He has also served on many state committees and is presently co-chairman of the queen committee with his wife. He has also served as the PSACF president for two years.

They have eight children who are very involved in their local fairs.

Long and operated a dairy farm for 38 years. He was also an FFA teacher at Tyrone High School and a Blair County 4-H leader.

Now retired from dairying, Long operates more than 300 acres of crops and dairy replacements.

Long has also received the Community Service Award from Sinking Valley Grange 484 and was recognized by Blair County Farm Bureau with a good leader award.

He has been Blair country's Farm Bureau director and president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau for nine years. In addition he has served as chairman of Blair County Conservation District for six years and Farm Director for 19 years.

ment and many hand-tools used on Ukrainian farms. "Part of my job was to make recommendations to help them make money to get equipment," he said. For example, he recommended to cooperative members that they should increase their cow numbers to make butter and cheese for market.

Many of the farmers in the pictures were women. "Ladies seem to do most of the farming and if the husband could find a job elsewhere, he did," he said.

Almost every home had a vineyard, and Brubaker was able to visit a winery and food processing plant.

Ukrainians who could prove that their family owned ground before communism began its reign in the country can now reclaim that ground, said Brubaker. The climate and rich soil is comparable to Pennsylvania.

Also during his visit he attended an agriculture exhibition, where standholders displayed their food products. Brubaker was also asked to speak at the exhibition, and was able to tell the audience about Pennsylvania and compare the commonwealth to the Ukraine.

On the lighter side, he paid several cents for a lottery ticket and was the lucky winner of a sheep, to the delight of the Ukrainians. After leading the animal around at the event, he left it at the host home.

Other highlights included picking mushrooms in the forest and purchasing 25 fruit trees for a cooperative, which the Ukrainians dubbed "Luke's Lane."

Schellenger Named Acting Executive Director Of Lancaster Farmland Trust

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The board of trustees of the Lancaster Farmland Trust named Heidi Schellenger as the acting executive director of the trust at the board's monthly meeting.

"As we conduct our national search for a new executive director, we are confident that Heidi will continue to administer the business of our organization," said Lee Dmitzak, chairman.

He said, "Heidi has worked as the trust's director of land preservation for the past two years, during which time she has gained extensive experience assisting farmers with the easement process. She also has assisted with numerous fundraising campaigns, managed several personnel hires, and has gained supervisory skills."

The private, nonprofit trust preserved a record 23 farms last year, and Schellenger hopes to continue the Trust's successes by having another record-breaking year in 2002.

"As exhilarated as I am about preserving 23 farms last year, I know that was just the tip of the iceberg, and that we still have an enormous amount of work to do," Schellenger said. 'I'm excited about the Trust's prospects for this year, both in farmland preservation and in raising the funds that we need to preserve the farms. I'm enjoying the opportunity to serve as acting executive director during this stage in the Trust's progress."

Letter Sent To Veneman

From: Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
Dept. Of Agriculture Office Of
The Secretary Samuel E. Hayes, Jr.
Date: January 17, 2002
To: The Honorable
Ann Veneman, Secretary
United States Department of Agriculture
1400 Independence Ave.,
Suite 200A
Washington, D.C. 20250
Dear Secretary Veneman:
Greetings from Pennsylvania.

The poultry industry and agricultural economy of Pennsylvania are suffering another outbreak of H_7N_2 avian influenza.

Vaccination. The Pennsylvania Animal Health and Diagnostic Commission and the Poultry Council of the PennAg Industries Association are urgently requesting that Pennsylvania be granted authorization to use the killed H_7N_2 vaccine that was produced in 1997. I join in that request. Production of the H_7N_2 vaccine in 1997 was initiated by the PA Department of Agriculture and approved by USDA; but, it was not authorized for use in 1997. The vaccine is being tested for potency. Pennsylvania wants to use the vaccine to help stem the spread of the current infection.

The poultry industry knows the continuing question about international trade. While I do not minimize what has been a vexing trade question, we should make every effort to neutralize this long-standing impediment to our 21st Century ability to protect our poultry industry. That issue should be eliminated so the poultry industry of Pennsylvania and the Nation can be properly protected against the continuing reoccurrence of avian influenza. However, in the most immediate sense, there will not be resolution of the international trade question. There is opportunity for some "middle ground" at the present time. For instance, we could vaccinate breeder broilers. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with USDA and the poultry industry, is making every effort to contain this outbreak and eradicate the virus by quarantining affected premises, depopulating infected flocks, delaying the re-population of any empty house in the area, intensifying bio-security, pursuing our monitored flock program, and increasing educational efforts. We have expertise and experience. Despite these actions, this virus continues to be prevalent. To date, we have depopulated 134,500 birds and it is uncertain whether containment will be possible. As you know, avian influenza can be explosive, fast-moving, and deadly. As a minimum, vaccination within a carefully prescribed protocol to defuse the trade question while still providing a protective shield for breeder birds should be considered for at least a pilot test.

Our veterinary technical advisors from the Animal Health and Diagnostic Commission, The Pennsylvania State University, University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine, industry and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, all of whom have had extensive experience with avian influenza, strongly believe that appropriate use of vaccine could aid in the control and eradication of this outbreak.

There are 436,000 high-value breeder birds in 29 flocks in the 10-mile zone around the index case. There is a logical use for the vaccine to protect these valuable breeder birds which are not being raised for poultry meat themselves. These breeder flocks are critical in the timely and sequential re-supply of young broiler birds for the industry. They should be protected from the virus. There are millions of meat birds in the affected area.

The specific protocol for use of the vaccine and the accompanying monitoring of vaccinated flocks would be developed in cooperation with USDA. We should really work together to establish an effective 'middle ground' protocol that provides for a carefully defined vaccination program on a test basis (EX: Broiler Breeders). Should this current infection spread and gain entrance into other concentrated regions of our very large and very important poultry industry in Pennsylvania, we could be facing a situation similar to the outbreak in 1983-84 when 11,500,772 birds were lost to avian influenza. It is not a thoughtful public policy to have a totally inflexible program without any attempt to seek effective middle ground.

This most recent infection is a natural phenomenon. However, it could be introduced by international terrorists. This fact adds to the case for a vaccination protocol that could act as a protective shield against such an invasion of our agriculture. In the event of agro-terrorism, there would be appropriate criticism of a public policy that is so inflexible it resists absolutely all efforts to vaccinate within a thoughtfully prescribed protocol as a methodology to protect our ability to propagate replacement birds and sustain our ability to produce food for the citizens of our Nation.

We are prepared to work with USDA to find a correct and pro-active public policy with regard to vaccination. It is respectfully recommended we start this process very, very soon. Please share your thoughts with me.

Live Bird Market in New York. Linked to avian influenza and the Pennsylvania poultry industry is the live bird market in New York. While it is not intended to be critical of New York, it is a fact that this live bird market is a constant source of infection and re-infection. It just happens to be in New York. For several months, USDA, PA Department of Agriculture, health professionals in adjoining states, and the poultry industry have been working to implement a plan that would attempt to systematically rid the live bird market as an insidious source of infection and re-infection. We were getting very close to the actual implementation of an eradication program late last year. Then it was delayed. It is now time to move forward again. We should not tarry. Please have USDA encourage the implementation of this bio-security effort.

Thank you very much for your assistance. I enjoy the positive relationship that exists between USDA and the PA Department of Agriculture. I greatly appreciate all of USDA's efforts. Thank you, Ann.

With warm personal regards, I remain

Sincerely,

SAMUEL E. HAYES, JR.

Cost-Cutting, Environmental Practices Highlight Conference

ADA, Ohio — Farmers looking to cut production costs while improving their environmental impact may find such opportunities through research information, management practices and technology updates being highlighted at the annual Conservation Tillage and Technology Conference, Feb. 25-26 at Ohio Northern University in Ada, Ohio.

The conference will cover a wide range of topics including agriculture-related panel discussions, strip till research, weed and pest management, soil fertility, GMO crops, value-added farming, crop consulting, soil and water quality issues, precision agriculture and producer programs.

The event is being sponsored by Ohio State University Extension, Northwest Ohio Soil and Water Conservation Districts, United States Department of Agriculture Natural Resources Conservation Service, USDA Farm Service Agency and the Ohio No-Till Council.

"The conference is designed to help farmers become more profitable and more environmentally responsible using conservation tillage and other technologies," said Randall Reeder, an Ohio State Extension agricultural engineer. "It's a fact that sediment is still the number one pollutant in terms of volume and it also carries chemicals that are attached to it. Keeping the soil on the land where it belongs not only minimizes environmental damage, but maintains soil quality. Topsoil is a farmer's most valuable resource."

Over 50 speakers from land-grant universities, the farming sector and agricultural industries and organizations will be speaking at the two-day conference. Highlights include a discussion of the 2002 Farm Bill, the latest in GMO crops from Monsanto and a presentation by Ohio State geologist Lonnie Thompson on the effect glaciers have on the land.

"We have topics that target livestock farmers, a group that you wouldn't think would be interested in a conservation tillage program. But there will be several topics related to livestock operations that have a heavy emphasis on environmental quality, such as composting," said Reeder.

Conference sponsors are also offering sessions on soil and water quality issues targeted specifically to crop consultants. "This one day session will likely give them the desired five CCA (Certified Crop Advisor) credits, which are pretty difficult to come by," said Reeder.

Early registration is $20 per day or $30 to attend both days. Registration after Feb. 11 is $30 a day or $40 for both days. For a copy of the agenda, registration information, or directions to Ohio Northern University, contact the Hancock County Ohio State Extension office at (419) 422-3851 or the Allen County Soil and Water Conservation District at (419) 223-0040.

Pennsylvania First Alternate Dairy Princess Is A Farm Girl At Heart

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co.) - "A farm girl at heart." That's how Pennsylvania's First Alternate Dairy Princess Sara Jennings is described by many who know her.

The daughter of the late Ronald and Nancy Jennings, Sara firmly embraces everything that farm life has to offer. Although she wasn't raised on a farm herself, there were plenty of opportunities to learn about farm life from both sets of her grandparents, Don and Leah Jennings, and Mark and Louise Scott. She's sure that their influence had a lot to do with her running for the Bradford County title.

"I wanted to be able to support what they did for all their lives," Jennings said, although she admits that when she was smaller, she was somewhat scared of the big cows.

"I think I was afraid because one of my grandfathers is a cattle dealer and his farm was a stop for cows on their way from Canada to Florida, so a lot of the cows were really skittish. They were on unfamiliar ground. I loved the calves, and that's still one of my favorite jobs, to work with the calves, even though we just have beef cows now."

Jennings got over her fear of cows when she stayed with a friend who had a 4-H calf. She helped lead the calf and get it ready to be shown at the fair. She is now proud to say that she has overcome her fear.

Because farming and quilting are both rich rural traditions, Sara chose to design her scrapbook with a patchwork quilt theme. Although she doesn't quilt herself, she has studied quilt designs and appreciates all the hard work that goes into each and every one.

"It took me a long time to get to where I am now. I think that's one of the most ironic things for me," said Jennings.

Knowing what it's like to be afraid of the cows now helps her relate to young children who aren't sure they want to get close to such big animals.

"I like to tell kids it's all right to be scared of the cows. They're nice, but you have to remember to ask their owners before you pet them and that kind of thing."

Jennings first entered the dairy princess program after spending a year as the Endless Mountains Maple Queen. She enjoyed visiting schools and meeting new people. The first year she entered the Bradford County Dairy Princess pageant, she was chosen as the second alternate and learned even more about the dairy industry.

'I really didn't know what to expect coming in the first year," said Jennings. 'I learned and I grew so much, and I really got a lot of encouragement."

Support came from family, friends and even workers at the state level. Her brother, Jeff, is also a willing participant, often finding himself inside a purple cow costume. He also helps set up props for her skits.

Because Jennings got so much out of the program, she decided to give it another try the following year.

"I want to be the county coordinator some day and I really thought that I should have at least two years of experience, even if I was an alternate again," she said.

Sara Jennings is grateful that both of her grandparents were dairy farmers. Here she shares a special moment with her grandfather, Mark Scott, who loaned her his FFA American Farmer Degree certificate to be one of her good luck charms.

But the second time on stage proved to be a golden opportunity for Jennings who would now get the chance to compete for the state title. She didn't make the trip, however, without her good luck charms — her grandfather's American Farmer Degree certificate, one of his FFA pins, and her father's pin for 10 years of service with the Department of Environmental Resources. She didn't put all her hopes on luck alone, however.

"I had goals going to the state pageant. I wanted to get an honorable mention in something," she said. "The biggest surprise is when I got down there, I had placed in all three."

Jennings came away from the pageant with an honorable mention award for her scrapbook, an honorable mention award for her skit, and a first place award for her speech.

"I had so far exceeded all of my goals by the time I had got to the pageant night, that I was happy already. I didn't have any more expectations for the night other than to get through it."

But there was one more surprise in store for Jennings. She would receive the title of Pennsylvania First Alternate Dairy Princess.

"When they called my name, I couldn't believe it," she said.

Jennings' achievements prove that if you really want something, you should never stop trying. At 21, Jennings thought that her age might put her at a disadvantage.

"I think a lot of people look at it and ask why is a girl this old interested in being a dairy princess. But I think when they realize that this is what I want to do for a career, then they see that there's a real strong potential there. This is like an internship."

She would like to see more older girls compete for the title.

"For me, I could put my college on hold. Other girls can lighten their class loads. I know that when I was in high school, I wouldn't have been able to put the time into it like I can now," she said.

Every day Jennings spends at least one hour completing dairy princess duties. Many days the tasks fill entire days or weeks. Even though it's a lot of responsibility, Jennings wants to encourage anyone who's interested to run.

"I want to encourage anyone to run, especially having served as an alternate and then becoming a member of the state royalty. That's just beyond my whole scope of things. It has changed my life so much. It would help anybody," she said.

Between the people she's met and the places she's gone, Jennings can't say enough about her experiences. It has definitely broadened her horizons beyond her wildest dreams.

Sara Jennings' room in her home is a testimonial to her love of the dairy industry and quilting. Here she is surrounded by reminders of her role as dairy princess and the quilts that she loves.

"I've been in Harrisburg more times since September than I ever had been in my entire life. I've gotten more confident in my abilities to deal with complete strangers," she said.

Rewards come from every promotion that she is involved with.

"There's always that one person who tries that piece of cheese and asks what kind it is and decides to buy some of it, or the little kid who wants to grow up to be dairy princess," she said.

She has also faced many challenges in her role.

"Sometimes when I talk to senior citizens' groups they will ask about things that I'm not familiar with, like a lot of the older practices or a lot about cow health. I have the basic dairy princess training on cow health, but I'm not really on the farm day to day, so I'm not as familiar with all the terms and the technical reasons why things happen. I don't know if they're trying to stump me on purpose or not," she said.

Both of her grandparents help her when she faces situations that she doesn't know how to deal with. They help her with things as simple as giving directions to a farm or explaining technical questions about farm life and herd health.

'I wouldn't be as knowledgeable if I didn't have both my grandparents to call on," said Jennings.

Another issue she finds challenging is dealing with kids who have no farm experience at all.

'We deal with so many things that to a non-farm family might seem inappropriate. We talk about where milk comes from on a cow and the farm kids will come out with one term and the other kids will all (gasp)," she said.

After completing her role as the state alternate, Jennings plans to resume her studies at Elmira Business Institute where she is working on an associate's degree in accounting. After that, she's not sure what the future has in store, maybe a career in agricultural communications or agricultural business.

Wherever life takes her, Jennings will always carry the memories of this year and the skills that she has learned with her. She will also continue to promote the dairy industry while encouraging others to promote it as well.

(and other hazards)

There was no one specific time that defined her condition, just an accumulation of increasingly notable incidents.

Forgetting little things. Confusion about locations. Recounting the same incidence or problem several times in a short conversation.

Still, Mother's physical health for her age was good. She carefully monitored what she ate and faithfully took her medication for controlling the diabetic condition she'd been diagnosed with several years ago. She gardened all summer and we frequently compared plants and weather conditions. Her skilled seamstress abilities continued to be challenged by the complicated remaking and repairing of items of clothing brought by friends and acquaintances. She took pleasure, in fact, in utilizing the mental agility required to best fix the stream of garments which flowed through her sewing area.

But, increasingly, Mom was scared. Scared of going out on the road by herself because she had lost her way to a destination some time ago. Scared of becoming increasingly forgetful and easily confused. Scared of living alone because of her increasing forgetfulness, but absolutely terrified of the thought of having to move to anywhere else.

When there was no answer to her phone on a recent afternoon, I was not immediately alarmed. She often drove a mile out the road for fresh foods, milk, bread, and gas. Follow-up calls also went unanswered. Speculation that her weekly dinner night out with a favorite niece and nephew had changed days proved wrong when I finally reached them at their home where they had been all evening.

Clinging to the hope that it was just a faulty phone problem, I drove the couple of miles to her home. And Mother had peacefully died, sitting in her own living room, relaxing in front of the TV.

Immediate sadness was countered by an overwhelming gratitude that mother had obviously not suffered.

A call to The Farmer, then to a wonderful dispatcher at Emergency 911, brought a dozen emergency folks from two municipalities streaming into the house within five minutes. They kindly made the necessary calls and insisted on staying until family began to arrive.

Thanks, to all of you.

Though she loved seeing the family and old friends they brought together, Mother despised viewings and funerals. Deaths in recent years, of our father, our sister, a nephew, her beloved sister and best friend, had all taken an increasingly-stressful toll on Mother. She had reassured us that she had made her own "arrangements."

But we found none. So, in lieu of her guidance of choice, we could only plan "arrangements" very similar to what she had chosen for Daddy.

I did not intend to write a column this week, trusting that you, reader-friends, would understand the absence. Instead, a strong inner urge booted me out of bed early one following morning to offer a plea.

To help your loved ones, make your "arrangements."

Our physical bodies — yours and mine — will cease to function at some point. We can only pray that they allow us to pass on as peacefully, quick and painless as Mother did. And despite how most of us dread to think about that time, we need to ponder — and share — how we would like our lives to be celebrated.

Here are the "arrangements" I choose. If possible, utilize any part of my physical body that might help someone else, then cremate the remains. Celebrate my soul with a brief, cheerful memorial service, preferably on a rolling farm hillside or in a park-like wooded setting. Sprinkle my ashes among the farm fields, the flowerbeds and toss a few near the mountain hunting camp we love. (Which is probably illegal in some way, but what are they going to do, arrest me?)

Instead of sending flowers, support a church, a worthy youth organization, or community emergency support group. Give blood. Volunteer a day at a nursing home. Rock an abandoned or abused baby. Do something kind for someone in need, perhaps anonymously.

Celebrate the life of someone you love by passing that love on to someone hurting or in need.

I think Mom would have approved.

County or all of Pennsylvania where there are a lot of rural areas but the cities are growing. You have to get out to the farmers to let them know that you're there for them, but at the same time you have to remind the farmer to get out and promote his own product. At the same time, you have that city person who needs to know that these farmers are there for them...that they're working hard to produce a clean, quality product and they need to know that milk is their best source for quality nutrients."

Although Jennings realizes that in her short reign she will not be able to bring her message to everyone, she hopes that she has been able to influence some people.

"I want to go out knowing that I tried my hardest to do as many things as I possibly could," she said.

Family Living Focus

When Lifestyles Change

Lifestyle changes accompany each stage in life. Think about the independence that comes with becoming an adult, the responsibility that comes with parenthood, or the freedom of having kids finally leave the "nest." The older years may bring new lifestyles and health conditions that impact what, where, and when you eat.

• Eating Alone — Special, Too!

For many people, eating is a time to enjoy the company of others, especially for those who cook for a family or share meals with someone else.

When older adults lose a spouse or live-in companion, eating alone can feel boring or depressing. And some people don't feel much like preparing food, or even eating. If you're in that position, or know someone who is, you can help spark a tired appetite.

You don't need to dine alone all the time. Eat with friends occasionally.

Get together with other seniors for weekly or monthly potluck suppers. Cut down on the work by taking turns acting as host. Encourage everyone to bring a favorite dish.

Visit the local senior citizens' center. They typically serve a full midday meal on weekdays. Usually the price is right. In some communities, meals for seniors are served in other local building, including churches or schools.

Added benefits: Senior citizen meals offer a place to meet old and new friends. And you can enjoy a meal that takes more to prepare than you'd likely do for yourself.

When eating out, take advantage of early bird specials when the portions are usually smaller and the prices are right. Consider splitting an order or take home half for another meal if the restaurant portions seem too large. Some restaurants also have senior citizen prices — be sure to ask.

Have a standing date with a friend or relative for lunch or dinner at your home.

If you're still "into cooking," but need someone to cook for, organize a gourmet club of like-minded friends.

When you do dine solo, make eating a special event. Looking forward to mealtime can offer a boost to both your appetite and your morale!

Set your place at the table, perhaps with a placemat, napkin, candles, and a centerpiece. You'll feel more like you've had a meal — and with more enjoyment — than if you had eaten right from the cooking pot.

For a change of pace, enjoy eating in different places. The kitchen, patio or deck, dining room or perhaps on a tray by the fireplace.

Create some atmosphere or interest. Turn on the radio. Play a favorite music tape or compact disk. Or watch your favorite television show as you eat.

Make food preparation easy, especially when you cook for one.

• Meals — Fast, Simple, Nutritious

Some older folks say they have no time to cook. They're too busy living life to its fullest. For others, lack of inclination or energy or perhaps a little less mobility, is the reason for quick and easy solutions to nutritious eating.

Try these tasty meals in minutes for starters:

For a quick breakfast, add hot water or hot milk to instant hot cereal. It's just as fast as many ready-to-eat cereals.

Keep a few frozen dinners and entrees on hand for quick cooking and easy cleanup. For the most nutrition, look for frozen meals with meat, poultry or fish; a starchy food (such as rice, pasta or potato); and a vegetable. Team them up with a salad, roll, piece of fruit and milk for a hearty meal that takes little effort.

Trying to lose weight? Choose from one of the many lower-calorie frozen dinners available.

If you're watching your salt intake, check the sodium on frozen meals and canned ones (stews, soups and chili). Many have more sodium; look for those with less.

Prepare foods ahead for later in the week, or to freeze as leftovers. For instance, make lower fat meatballs with lean ground turkey or beef. Brown the meatballs, drain any grease, then combine with tomato sauce. Serve over pasta on one day, over rice the next and freeze the rest for later.

Freeze homemade soups, stews, lasagna and other casserole dishes in small containers. Then thaw enough for one or two meals at a time. Label and date your packages to keep track of what you have in the freezer.

For easy-to-prepare salads, wash, tear and dry salad greens. Then store them in a plastic container for three or four days. Or you can even purchase washed, cut salad greens in a bag. So when you want a salad, put a handful of greens in a bowl and add your favorite toppings, perhaps sliced tomatoes, grated carrots or canned kidney beans.

Understanding Osteoporosis In Men

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Although osteoporosis is often thought of as a "woman's disease," 20 percent of the 25 million Americans who have osteoporosis are men.

In fact, osteoporosis affects nearly half of all people — women and men — over the age of 75.

Even though this disease has been studied more often in women than it has in men, there is basic information that can be useful in preventing the development of osteoporosis in men.

Normal Bone Development

Bones are living tissue that change constantly, with bits of old bone being removed and new bone laid down. Think of bone as a bank account, where you make "deposits" and "withdrawals" of bone tissue.

During normal childhood and adolescence, much more bone is added than removed, so that the skeleton grows both in size and density. The amount of tissue or bone mass in the skeleton reaches its maximum by the mid-30s. At this point, the amount of bone in the skeleton typically begins to decline slowly, as more bone is removed than added.

Because of their lighter, thinner frames, women have less bone mass to draw from as they age. In addition, women lose bone mass rapidly in the years after menopause. But by age 65 or 70, women and men lose bone mass at the same rate, and calcium absorption decreases in both sexes.

Adequate calcium intake, proper exercise, and good health habits are essential throughout life to ensure that the body has enough bone tissue to draw from in the later years.

Risk Factors

Osteoporosis is an exaggerated loss of bone tissue, a painful and disfiguring disease that weakens bones and makes them more likely to fracture. Fractures resulting from osteoporosis often occur in the wrist, spine, and hip.

These risk factors have been linked to osteoporosis in men:

• Decreases in male hormones, or hypogonadism, can cause reduced bone mass and lead to fractures. Although men do not undergo the equivalent of menopause, gonadal function does decline in some elderly men and, when fractures occur, they are often associated with male hypogonadism.

• Use of steroid hormones, which are sometimes used to treat certain diseases, can lead to breakdown of bone.

• Abuse of alcohol plays an important role in weakening bones, even in relatively young or middle-aged men. For example, alcohol has been found to reduce circulating levels of the male hormone, testosterone. Studies have also found higher alcohol and cigarette consumption in men with osteoporosis.

Great Chicken Recipes Sought For National Cooking Contest

WASHINGTON, D.C. — America's chicken producers are inviting home cooks nationwide to share their best recipes in the 45th National Chicken Cooking Contest. The top prize isn't chicken feed — it's $25,000 cash!

A finalist winner from each state and the District of Columbia will receive an expense-paid trip to Baltimore, Maryland, for the National Cook-Off on May 30, 2003. In addition to the $25,000 first prize, the contest offers $11,000 in runner-up prizes. The contest is sponsored by the National Chicken Council and the U.S. Poultry and Egg Association.

"The contest is an exciting and rewarding experience for every participant regardless of whether he or she wins a prize," said contest director Nancy Tringali. "And there is always a chance of walking off with enough money for a new kitchen!"

Cooks may enter the contest through the Website www.eatchicken.com; by fax to (202) 293-4005; or by regular mail at Chicken Contest, P.O. Box 28158, Washington, D.C. 20038-8158. Complete contest rules and official entry blanks are available on the Website or by request to the same address.

A contestant may enter as many recipes as he or she wishes, but each recipe should be on a separate sheet of paper with the contestant's name, address and phone number for contact purposes. Entries are due by Oct. 15.

Chicken is the only required ingredient for recipes, and it can be prepared whole, in parts or in any combination of parts. Recipes using marinated chicken, cooked chicken, and ground chicken are also allowed. All recipes must be original (which means not previously published in the same, or substantially the same, form), make four to eight servings and take no more than three hours to prepare twice — one for judging and once for display. And, because of fire regulations, no grilling recipes are allowed.

Those who appreciate the flavor of leg meat have a chance to win additional prize money. Any of the top five winners whose recipe uses leg meat (leg, thigh and/or drumstick) predominantly will win a bonus prize of $1,000 on top of the regular prize. The chicken industry added the bonus to help promote the usage of leg meat.

Selection of state finalists is the responsibility of an independent recipe-judging panel selected by the National Chicken Council. Judging at the National Cook-Off is done by a panel of newspaper and magazine food writers.

The National Cookoff of the 44th National Chicken Cooking Contest was held in Sacramento, Calif., on April 6, 2001. Here is the winning recipe, prepared by Bob Gadsby of Great Falls, Mont.

Web Resource For Grandparents Raising Grandchildren

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Six percent of the nation's children live in a grandparent-headed household. Whatever the reason and situation, these grandparents often face a host of obstacles, from financial difficulties to legal problems involving child care when one doesn't have legal custody.

To support these families and help them navigate through their unique set of emotional, legal and daily living challenges, Penn State Cooperative Extension and AARP developed a web-based directory of helpful groups and organizations.

"One in 10 grandparents has been the primary support of a grandchild at some time in their life," says Matt Kaplan, associate professor of intergenerational programs and aging. "The number of these families has really increased in recent years, both in Pennsylvania and across the nation."

Many factors contribute to the trend, Kaplan explains, including increasing drug and alcohol abuse, teen-age pregnancy, HIV/AIDS, incarceration and divorce.

Often grandparents unexpectedly find themselves in the position of raising a second family with limited community support. Organizations and groups have emerged to support them, but the families often aren't aware of them.

The directory is located on the web at http://AgExtEd.cas.psu.edu/FCS/mk/grg.html. It currently contains information on 98 groups and organizations. Organizations that provide resources for grandparents raising grandchildren can submit information online to be included in the directory.

1 cup sun-dried tomatoes (packed in olive oil, drained)
1 tablespoon freshly ground black pepper
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 tablespooons chopped, fresh oregano
½ teaspoon balsamic vinegar

7-inch round loaf Italian bread
1 sweet onion, thinly sliced, separated
¼ pound thinly sliced mozzarella cheese
¼ pound thinly sliced salami
¼ pound thinly sliced ham

President Bush, Sec. Veneman Initiate 4-H Centennial Celebration

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President George W. Bush and Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman joined 4-H members from Texas and the Metropolitan Washington area to officially inaugurate 4-H's 100-year anniversary celebration at a White House meeting, Thursday afternoon, Jan. 17.

"As a former member of 4-H, I know first-hand the value of this outstanding youth development program," said Veneman. "For 100 years, 4-H has provided unique opportunities for its members to learn, to grow and to work cooperatively in their communities and for their country. President Bush's continued support of 4-H and other youth development programs demonstrates this Administration's commitment to young people and to their education."

Joining the President and Secretary Veneman were 4-H members Jared Locklear of Cameron, Texas; William Jolley of Washington, D.C.; Molly Curran of Laytonsville, Md.; Sarah Piechocinski of Montgomery Village, Md.; Norman Huang of Rockville, Md.; and Ashley Wells of Rockville, Md.

During the meeting, 4-H presented President Bush with its highest honor, the "Partner in 4-H" award for his support of 4-H and the Texas Cooperative Extension Service while serving as Governor of Texas. President Bush was nominated by Gayle W. Hall an associate professor from Texas A&M and a 4-H Youth Development Specialist, who was also in attendance.

President George W. Bush receives a 4-H National Recognition for Outstanding Service Award from Jared Locklear, Texas 4-H Council 2nd vice president, as Secretary Ann M. Veneman and Deputy Secretary Jim Moseley look on.

USDA has also approved $1.4 million for the National 4-H Council, the national, private sector non-profit partner of 4-H and the Cooperative Extension System, to develop a cooperative development educational program.

The program will provide individuals with an in-depth understanding of how agribusiness related cooperatives play an important role in increasing profitability and global competitiveness for ranchers, farmers, and entrepreneurs.

"4-H has been a leader in helping youth develop leadership and technical skills in all parts of the nation," said Veneman. "These funds will contribute to 4-H's important role in providing young people with quality education and development programs."

4-H is part of the youth education branch of the Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service, an agency of USDA's Research, Economics and Education mission.

Since its inception in 1902, 4-H has been known throughout the country for its strong programs in helping rural youth develop leadership and technical skills.

Today, 4-H has 6.8 million members who are participating in such projects as the Citizenship and Civic Education Program, Communications and Expressive Arts Program, Consumer and Family Sciences, Environmental Education and Earth Sciences, Healthy Lifestyle Education, Personal Development and Leadership, Plants and Animals, and Science and Technology.

4-H Shooting Sports Workshop To Take Place In Butler County

EBENSBURG (Cambria Co.) — The Pennsylvania 4-H Shooting Sports Committee will conduct a training program and instructor certification course for adults interested in working with youths on April 5-7 at Camp Lutherlyn in Butler County.

The workshop will be funded in part by grants from the "The NRA Foundation," the National Wild Turkey Federation and Federal Cartridge Corporation.

Programming will involve specialized training and certification for instructors in the NRA/4-H rifle, pistol, muzzleloading and shotgun shooting sports programs.

Archery participants will receive National Archery Association Level 1 certification. Program participants will be certified to organize project clubs and conduct instruction in these program areas.

One hundred and seventy-two 4-H volunteer leaders from 42 counties participated in the Pennsylvania 4-H Shooting Sports workshop held in April 2001 in Lycoming County.

The 4-H Shooting Sports program has grown rapidly in Pennsylvania with over 3,000 youths ages 8 to 18 completing projects in this program area in 2001.

4-H members receive training in marksmanship, and firearm safety and handling. They also have the opportunity to compete in county, regional, statewide and national contests. Air pistol, air rifle, archery, shotgun and .22 rifle contests are held for teens at 4-H State Achievement Days at Penn State University in August.

In July 2001, two teams representing Penn State 4-H competed with 19 other states in National 4-H Competition at San Antonio, Texas. The archery and shotgun teams represented Pennsylvania well, bringing home the national championship and a number of team and individual trophies.

The objectives of the program are:

1. Develop leadership abilities, build character and assume citizenship responsibilities.
2. Develop responsible sportsmanship, ethical behavior and respect for safe conduct of shooting sports activities.
3. Gain awareness and appreciation of the broad spectrum of shooting sports and related activities as life-long leisure opportunities.
4. Develop shooting knowledge and skills.
5. Become aware of related career opportunities.
6. Gain in-depth experiences in individual specialized areas of interest.
7. Gain enjoyable, positive relationships with adults and peers.

ANSWER — Gloria Minckler requested recipes using rice flour. According to the U.S.A. Rice Council, more than 100,000 people are unable to eat foods from grains such as wheat, barley, rye, and oats; others may also react to millet and buckwheat. This condition is know as Celiac Sprue Disease and is basically aproblem of malabsorpiton. The primary treatment calls for the omission of any product that contains certain proteins such as gluten.

Rice, a non-allergenic food, is ideal for a gluten-free diet, and is suitable for most allergy diets. You can also request more recipes from the USA Rice Council by sending a self-addressed business-size envelope to them at P.O. Box 740121, Houston, Texas 77274. More information is also available from the Gluten Intolerance Group of North American, P.O. Box 23053, Seattle, WA 98102-0353. Learn Pennsylvania German

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society will offer a 10-week, introductory Pennsylvania German dialect class this spring. The class is intended for persons who wish to begin study of the dialect as spoken in the York and Lancaster County area.

Host Families Sought For Japanese Teens

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — Host a Japanese student July 21-Aug. 18.

Host families share one thing in common — a willingness to welcome a Japanese youngster into their home as a family member, not as a tourist or special guest. Families are required to have a child who is the same sex and who is close in age to the Japanese youth, and they need to have the enthusiasm to share their lives and their culture with their Japanese visitor for the four-week homestay.

The Japanese members want to experience daily life in North America, so no special trips or entertainment are required. They look forward to doing family chores, learning new games, shopping, trying new foods, and sharing their own Japanese culture, foods and customs with their host family. The Japanese youth are happy to share a room with their host sister or brother.

The costs of hosting a Japanese student are minimal. The Japanese organizations provide complete medical insurance, and students bring their own spending money for souvenirs and personal purchases. Hosts are not required to be 4-H members to participate, although the Penn State University approved screening process is required.

Host family applications and additional information about this or other 4-H opportunities are available by contacting Nancy Kadwill at Penn State Cooperative Extension in Montgomery County at (610) 489-4315. Montgomery County Cooperative Extension is an educational outreach of the College of Agricultural Sciences at Penn State University.

Consuming Thoughts

Penn State Extension Home Economist for Berks Co.

Quick meals do not have to be boring. In fact, by focusing on foods that cook quickly like pasta, fresh vegetables, boneless chicken, beef and fish fillets, you can turn out a delicious gourmet meal in less than 30 minutes. Follow these suggestions and try the recipe that follows.

• Consult your menu. If you are going to cook chicken on Tuesday, take it out of the freezer Monday morning and let it thaw in your refrigerator. If you forget, defrost it in the microwave and take care of other chores while it thaws. It is not safe to thaw foods on the kitchen counter!

• Try simple variations on old standbys. Add a bit of orange rind or fresh grated ginger (keep some in the freezer ready to grate) to vegetables while they cook. Or add salsa or drizzle of lemon or lime juice before serving. Bake or microwave poultry as usual, but with mustard and herbs, no-salt added tomato puree and herbs, or salsa on top. Or poach in orange or tomato juice or low sodium chicken bouillon with a dash of thyme or cinnamon.

For a Mexican touch, spread fish with plain lowfat yogurt and top with salsa before cooking. Add dried fruit or celery, scallions or mushrooms to a basic rice or couscous recipe. Vary salads by using different in-season vegetables, and lots of them. Experiment with different flavored vinegars as a dressing.

To make salads quickly, wash a few days' worth of lettuce at a time. Spin or pat dry and store in plastic bags in the refrigerator.

• Use leftovers wisely. Leftovers from the Sunday roast chicken can make a wonderful casserole or stir-fry the next day. Leftover chili becomes a great topper for a taco salad or a baked potato. Leftover pork roast is delicious cubed and tossed with vegetables for an easy curry or crepe filling.

• Organize your cooking to use your time efficiently. Start the dish, which needs to cook or marinate the longest; chop vegetables while pasta or meat cooks.

Easy Chicken Teriyaki

For an oriental-style dinner, serve with rice. This dish is also tasty served with baked potatoes, and simple steamed vegetables.

½ cup teriyaki sauce
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
½ cup water
4 skinless chicken breast halves
½ cup white vinegar with/ without bones
¼ -½ teaspoon garlic powder

Stir together all ingredients except chicken in a baking dish or pan. Add chicken pieces, turn a few times to coat well with sauce. If still on the bone, microwave on High, with meatier parts near edge of dish, covered with wax paper 18-20 minutes. Rotate dish ½ turn after 9-10 minutes. Let stand 4-5 minutes before serving. (Or bake bone-in chicken at 375 with flesh side down in sauce, covered, for 45-50 minutes).

If boneless, microwave at medium-high, covered with wax paper, 15-20 minutes or until done. Rotate ½ way through. Let stand, covered, 2-3 minutes before serving. (Or, cook with the marinade in a covered skillet on the stove, simmering 20-25 minutes or until done.) Serves 4.

Kids Korner

At home, Timothy spends many hours with his calves and is responsible for daily care.

Santa with Rudolf is really Timothy Betz and his calf.

Timothy Talks About The Good And Bad In Show Life

WATSONTOWN (Northumberland Co.) — Timothy Betz, 11, was exposed to the "show life" at a young age. His dad was the dairy herd manager at Delaware Valley College in Doylestown, from 1993-1999. He traveled with his mom and dad, Kelly and Shane, to all of the shows and liked to help take care of the show cows.

At the Pa. State Junior Show, Timothy Betz shows the second place winter calf, a Red and White Holstein named Middlebush Finale Lizzy.

Timothy is a fifth grade honor roll student at the Warrior Run Middle School in Turbotville. He is active in the school band where he plays the drums. He also likes to sing and play the guitar. At home, he enjoys riding his four-wheeler, and playing with his brother Zachary, 5. He is an active member of his church youth group and serves as acolyte at the Trinity United Church of Christ in Turbotville.

Timothy spends a great deal of time with his calves and heifers, and is solely responsible for taking care of them. His mom does lend a hand with halter breaking though. All of his hard work and dedication have paid off as he has won several showmanship awards over the past three years. His first year (1999) at the Pa. State Junior Dairy Show, he was 10th in the junior showmanship competition. The past two years, he has captured the overall Junior Showmanship Award at the county fair, (Montour-DeLong Fair) which is held in Washingtonville. He has qualified for the State Junior Show all three years that he has been in 4-H. One of his biggest accomplishments took place this year when his Red and White Holstein winter calf, Middlebush Finale Lizzy - RED placed second at the Pa. State Junior Dairy Show.

Timothy is an active member in the North-Mount 4-H Dairy Club. He was the recipient of the Roxy LeVan Award in 2000. To apply for this award, all members had to write an essay about their experiences that year in 4-H. He won a $100 savings bond. He also wrote an essay this past summer about why he wanted to return to Camp Brule (Sullivan County) 4-H camp. His essay won the junior division and he was awarded a free week at camp.

This year Timothy was able to persuade two of his friends to join 4-H. Neither friend had ever shown a calf before. He invited his friends over to his uncle's farm and taught them how to lead, set up, and clip a calf. They all had much fun together, as Timothy enjoys helping others.

Timothy is looking forward to showing this year as he finally has his first "bred and owned" animal. Her name is Lime-TAB Red Marker Riley — RED She was born on Dec. 6, 2001, and Timothy helped his dad deliver her. He spends a lot of time with her and she already follows him around the yard like a puppy!

Timothy writes this letter about his show experience:

Last year, I ended my essay waiting for my first year 4-H project to have her calf. I was very excited about this. Unfortunately, seven months into her pregnancy, something happened and my heifer lost her calf. After this, she became very sick. My mom took her to Cornell Veterinary hospital in New York where they tried to save her. After a three-week battle, we had to put her to sleep. This was very hard for my mom and I. We both cried for a long time. I still miss her and it was very hard to get my show season started without my favorite heifer. Somehow I managed.

Good things this year were that I was able to talk two of my friends into joining our 4-H club; Elias Biddle and John Hertzler. We all had a good time this year. They spent quite a bit of time at my house where my parents helped Elias and John to learn things they needed to know about showing a dairy calf. We always had a good time, but we worked very hard.

In June, I wrote an essay for a contest and I ended up winning. I won a free week of 4-H camp at Camp Brule. This was great because I was already planning on going, but now my parents didn't have to pay. They were happy about that too. I always have a great time at camp and this year was no different. There are always many things to do and lots of people to talk to.

I went to several different shows this year. I showed a winter yearling (my project from last year), and I also purchased two new calves. One was a Holstein spring calf and the other was a Red and White Holstein winter calf. I had a pretty good show year with both of them. Both of my calves qualified for the Pa. State Junior Dairy Show in Harrisburg. My biggest accomplishment with them was in Harrisburg when my Red and White calf won second place. I was very happy about this.

I also had another good year in showmanship. I won overall junior showman at my county fair for the second year in a row. This was really exciting for me. I work very hard with my calves over the show season so that they listen to me when we get in the show ring. Afterwards, some of my friends asked me how I managed to win two years in a row. I just told them, many long walks with my calves.

Dear Twig: My little brother burps a lot. Why?
It depends on how old he is If your brother is a baby he might not be able to help it Babies burp a lot If your brother isn't a baby, maybe he's 7, maybe he's 17, then he might be doing it to bug you
Here's a clue If he chases you around and corners you in the living room right before he burps, and giggles like a spotted hyena (Crocuta crocuta) when he does it, then he might, just might, be doing it to pester you Ask him to stop Or hide his X-Men action figures
Now, as for the PHYSICAL reasons why someone burps, here's what scientists say Burps start in your stomach as tiny bubbles in the liquid glop that used to be your food Most of these bubbles are swallowed air, many are trapped in what you eat and drink They swirl around in your stomach, rise to the top of the glop, and pop
All this makes air build up in your stomach Eventually the air goes up into your esophagus, the tube that runs from your stomach to your mouth At the top the air comes out as a burp
Some burps are quiet And some aren't Good manners, of course, require that you excuse yourself if you burp and it rattles the windows

Farm Wives: Rotational Grazing Easier, Safer, More Rewarding

LOU ANN GOOD

KIRKWOOD (Chester Co.) — If mama ain t happy ain't nobody happy is an often heard quote One of the ways to keep mama happy according to several farm wives interviewed is to use rotational grazing

It is the most sensible way to farm Financial investment is much less than with conventional farming methods and it s much safer said Caroline Landis who with her husband Arden operate a 140-acre dairy farm in Chester County

Her sentiments are echoed by Carol Greathouse Mercer County who said "The only machinery we have is a golf cart that we drive back and forth to move the tape to section off paddocks on 160 acres There s no equipment to worry about with having our small children working side by side with us."

In Loyalville, June Hertzler is a vocal advocate of rotational grazing It s what enabled her and her husband Duane to transform their 370-acre farm with 250 Holsteins from debt ridden to profitable

The male farmer is most often the outspoken supporter or critic of farming methods But in the majority of farms, the wife is as involved in day-to-day chores and is qualified to voice her opinion of what works and what doesn t

Here's a peek into the lives of three women who are active grazers

Carol Greathouse

Carol grew up on a Jersey farm in Berks County She worked for the Jersey Association and, through her responsibilities as informational director met her husband-to-be David who was already operating a Jersey dairy farm in Illinois

After marriage the couple settled on his Illinois farm but Carol said there was little dairy support and agricultural services in that area. So the couple moved to Carol s family s farm and worked for her parents for three years while looking for a place to call their own

They did not want to settle in an area with land development pres

I was at the Conservation Education Area of Ag Progress Days from Aug 14 to 16 where we held a grazing forum each day at 11 a.m in the presentation tent

I had a dairy a beef and a sheep producer on the panel to tell their story as to how why when and where they do what they do in a grazing system

We hear the producer s side of the grazing story Some come with pictures or graphs or printed copies of their story but they all share their experiences Folks in the audience are able to ask the panelists questions about grazing and their operations

As I was sitting here reflecting on some comments made by several panelists I realized that they were discussing operations with low dollar investments in machinery I have to chuckle because there we were at Ag Progress Days surrounded by all the latest in brightly colored, high technology farm machinery and most of the graziers on the panel were discussing low tech ology Quite a contrast

In fact the grazing forum was being conducted at the same time as field demonstrations of forage harvesting equipment The size of the audience that black smoke and whirling gears attracted was much larger than the audience I had for the grazing forums. Ironically how ever, I was hearing money paying graziers are making money paying taxes and not worrying about making the large investment in steel that their counterparts who were in that large audience are having to make

When did we as a society change our way of thinking about taking livestock from a normal grazing scenario to one where they are con

LOU ANN GOOD

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — West Lampeter Fair may be a small fair, but it has big clout with Jacqueline Pratt.

The 16-year-old touted her fair last weekend before 850 persons attending the 16th annual Pennsylvania Fair Queen Pageant, Hershey.

Her verbal tour of the West Lampeter Fair detailing the exhibits and the importance of agriculture capitulated her into the finalist's circle. After answering an impromptu question about the positive outcomes of the Sept. 11th events, Jacqueline was crowned the state fair queen—which means that she now has 114 fairs to represent throughout the state.

The fairs are considered "Showplaces of Agriculture" in Pennsylvania. The new queen said that she is eager to promote agriculture since it is Pennsylvania's number one industry.

Jacqueline also was named Miss Congeniality among the 47 contestants, who competed for the state title after gaining eligibility by winning at the local level.

The other finalists and the fairs they represented included Stephanie Blackstone, Bedford; Sarah McLaughlin, Erie; Morgan Bacher, Clearfield; and Kylie Pajak, Washington, who was selected runnerup.

The state title also earns a $1,500 scholarship for Jacqueline and a basketful of Mary Kay cosmetics.

The runnerup receives a $300 scholarship. All five finalists received $50 and a cosmetics.

The daughter of Dr. Robert and Yvonne Pratt, Willow Street, Jacqueline attends Lampeter-Strasburg High School. She is captain of varsity and competition cheerleading squads and earned all-star and all-American cheerleader status.

At school, Jacqueline is on the varsity track and field teams, and is a member of the National Honor Society, student council, school newspaper, the school television station, chorus, and environment club. The busy teenager also finds time to act as peer mediator and as a leader of Fellowship of Christian students.

Jacqueline has received several awards for her writing and has represented her high school at the Millersville University Science Bowl for two consecutive years. She is an active member of Lampeter United Methodist Church, and volunteers at the Lancaster Region Hospital birth center.

For fun, Jacqueline enjoys riding horses, reading, writing, cooking, gardening, and being with her family.

Judges for the event were Louis Sallie, Camp Hill; Pat Miller, Harrisburg; and Cassie Abbott, Altoona.

Julie Sollenberger, the 2001 state fair queen representing Kimberton Fair, shared her experiences about visiting 17 fairs and accompanying a group to Mexico with the Department of Agriculture.

Agriculture is Pennsylvania's number one industry, a fact that Jacqueline said she is eager to promote.

The queen coronation was conducted in conjunction with the Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs and the Pennsylvania State Showmen's Association annual convention, Hershey Lodge and Convention Center January 16-19.

The Forge has horse-related items, books, and catalogs.

ANSWER — A reader wanted to know how to start poinsettias from slips of the plant. Also, some readers asked how to care for poinsettias in order to have the plants bloom for the upcoming Christmas. Thanks to Penn State Extension for supplying the following information.

Place plants in a warm sunny window and apply ample water to prevent the soil from drying. Temperatures below 60 degrees or above 75 degrees have adverse effects on the plant, which are sensitive to sudden changes in temperature, improper watering, and low light intensities.

Modern cultivars may require an application of a complete soluble fertilizer to keep the plant in top condition.

The plants can be carried over a second year by drying them off in March, and storing in a cool, well-ventilated place until May. Keep them growing until March, then gradually reduce the water supply. Do not let them dry out in storage. In May cut the plant back to 3-5 inches in height, and start them back into growth by starting to water and moving them back into a warm, sunny window. As soon as the temperature stays above 50 degrees at night, move them outside into light shade. Pinch back each shoot once during the summer to get a well shaped plant.

When cool nights start in late August, bring the poinsettia inside to a warm, sunny window. Day temperatures should be 70-75 degrees and night temperatures no higher than 60-62 degrees. Fertilize plants every 7-10 days with a solution made by dissolving one-half teaspoon of a completed soluble fertilizer such as 15-15-15 to one quart water.

Poinsettias form flower buds under cool, long nights. If plants are to flower again for Christmas, the plants must be kept in an unlighted room at night. The same effect can be achieved by covering plants with a light-tight box between 5 p.m.-8 a.m. from Oct. 1 until Thanksgiving. After this period flower buds will be well formed, and plants will suffer no adverse effect from light during this period.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Almost the end of January! What a month this has been. Too many days filled with doctor appointments.

My husband has been troubled with aches and pains for months. These have finally been analyzed as a major back problem. So, 10 days ago he had a five-hour operation.

Our daughter, who lives near Atlanta, flew to Lancaster County. It is a comfort to know that our children care enough to come and be with us.

My husband has been fitted for a brace, which he must wear for several months. Recently, he was at a loss for words and called the brace a "cage." In a way I guess that is what it will be. He must learn to walk miles everyday — so the doctors tell him.

While he is in the hospital, my daughter and I hope to visit some relatives that she has not seen for a while. And, then there is shopping to occupy our time as there are always a few things that we need.

On occasions like this there is always a lot of adjusting to do. No longer can we get in the car and just go somewhere. One must remember what we are capable of doing. At least, winter is one of the best times to be housebound.

I'm hoping that we can find enough things to keep him interested and reasonably active. There are many books on many subjects in our bookcase and on our shelves. They cover subjects like clocks, trolleys, mills, quilts, antique furniture, etc.

As most of our families live far away, we cannot expect too many visitors. Today neighbors have very different occupations and do not even know of other people's situations.

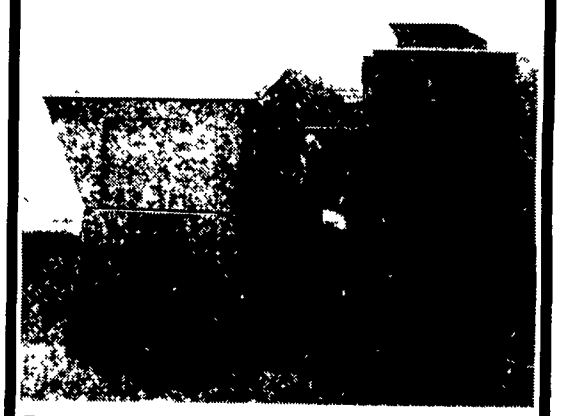
Heat with Corn!



Burn Shelled Corn In This Biomass Furnace

A BETTER ALTERNATIVE

The corn burning furnace has many advantages over wood and coal heat. The large storage bin holds up to 14 bushels of fuel, which is automatically fed into the combustion chamber as needed. There's no need to load the furnace several times a day. The use of corn also eliminates the bark mess, insects, splinters, and handling problems connected with the use of wood fuel, and the dust and dirt from coal. UL Approved.

War Historian Sees Art In Early American Pieces

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

STONYCREEK (Somerset Co.) — Richard Sturtz of Stonycreek Township in Somerset County combines his love for Somerset County artifacts and his passion for war history into an impressive collection of Americana.

"I've always had an interest in local artifacts. Everything Somerset County intrigues me and I love to go searching for items with a story behind them," said Sturtz, who works as a record specialist in the county's mental health agency and in his spare time, enjoys Civil War re-enacting.

He most recently played an extra in the upcoming movie "Gods and Generals."

Amidst original, one-of-a-kind items made only in Somerset County, like a ladle and a skimmer made by hand in the 1800s, a bee hive made of rye straw banded together with oak strips made in the mid-1800s, a school bell from a one-room schoolhouse in Wills from the 1910s, Sturtz' collection boasts of well-researched and well-kept pieces.

He gives much credit to his friend, the late Ernie Fritz, an antique dealer in Somerset, for peaking his interest years ago.

"I learned a lot from him and I miss him," says Sturtz. "We traveled throughout Somerset County looking for Somerset County items and learning the history that went along with them."

During one of those travels, Sturtz came across a redware pottery spittoon made by Henry Grady, from Shanksville. The spittoon is one of three known to exist.

He also has a flour box dated 1852 made by Samuel Thomas, a local person, a Lewis Weighley coverlet made in Somerset County in 1855 and a Amish quilt made in Springs in the 1800s. He has also acquired a signed and dated Pennsylvania Long Rifle. His Goeb New Testament Bible and Almanac are also prized possessions. Frederick Goeb was the first to print a German Bible West of the Alleghenies.

His collection does not stop there. Sturtz, who is a local historian and re-enactor, has enjoyed picking up both Civil War and World War II objects.

He owns a Civil War cartridge and cap box and more than 20 World War II uniforms. He has recently acquired the World War I uniform of the late Lester Kimmel, who was more than 100 years old when he died.

Also, he owns the late John Barchey's Pacific Theater medic helmet, which has a small cross on it and is a much-prized relic. He also has World War II weapons and other items, like cigarette lighters, insignias, canteens, and field gear.

A few years ago, Sturtz purchased and restored a 1944 World War II personnel carrier, which he is often asked to use in local parades.

Sturtz' father, the late Wilbert Sturtz, died Nov. 20, 2000, on Veteran's Day, and the younger Sturtz has found a new interest in collecting and researching World War II memorabilia.

"My father never talked about his war experiences much until the August before he died," says Sturtz. "We sat down on the front porch and he told me some interesting stories. I'm glad I have that. Everyone needs to take time to talk to our World War II veterans. They are a part of history now and an important part of their life will be forgotten if we don't document it now."

Although Sturtz remains discreet about his historical pursuits, he is a well-traveled Civil War re-enactor who has a long list of credits to his name.

It all started about six years ago, when he and a fellow historian, Tom Fisher, went to see the re-enactment of the 125th anniversary of Gettysburg.

Since that time, Sturtz has re-enacted locally and regionally and most recently, played an extra in the motion picture film, "Gods and Generals," filmed in Maryland.

From Nov. 12 to Dec. 13, Sturtz took a sabbatical from his job in medical records and played the role of both a northern and southern Civil War soldier during the Battle of Fredericksburg. The movie itself was mostly filmed at the Flook Farm in Keteysville, Md. but the crews first worked at Harper's Ferry, W.Va., which was made to look like the town of Fredericksburg. Sturtz stayed mostly in Hagerstown, Md.

"This film was also of special interest for me," says Sturtz, "because my ancestor Hiram Sturtz, a soldier in the 142nd Pa. Volunteers Co. F, the Berlin (Pa.) Company, was killed in Fredericksburg."

"Gods and Generals," written by Jeff Shaara, serves as the first novel in a three-set historical novel series. The first book written in the series was "Killer Angels," the book Jeff Shaara's father, the late Michael Shaara, authored and the same book which served as the basis for the movie "Gettysburg."

Since his father's death. Jeff Shaara has written the prequel, "Gods and Generals," which details the life of legendary Stonewall Jackson and the Battle of Fredericksburg, and the newly-released sequel called "Last Full Measure."

Sturtz works closely with Antietam National Battlefield and Harper's Ferry, W.Va., for special events and a few years ago, he played a soldier in a documentary filmed by the National Park Service for Antietam National Battlefield.

Sturtz believes that the casting company for "Gods and Generals" got his name and telephone number from the National Park Service. Sturtz has also served as the Provost Marshal at Harper's Ferry on the Fourth of July for the past few years. He also started going to the Eisenhower farm in Gettysburg for World War II re-enacting a living history weekend in September.

"In seventh grade I wrote an essay on Gettysburg and drew the figures on the cover with crayon so I must have been interested back then. I guess that's where it started from," he said.

Sturtz can also be credited with locating Civil War Col. Robert P. Cummins' saddle, which had been in storage but is now on public display at the Berlin Historical Society building in southern Somerset County. Col. Cummins was of 142nd Pennsylvania Volunteers from Somerset County and was a county sheriff.

This Lewis Weighley coverlet is Sturtz's most prized one of his coverlet collection. Notice also the beehive made of rye straw banded with oak strips, the redware pottery spittoon, the gun and powder horn from an 1800s gunsmith, and many photographs depicting Somerset County history.

Richard Sturtz, a Civil War re-enactor, enjoys acquiring war uniforms and artifacts with stories that accompany them.

Sturtz has since become friends with Marion Runnells of Utah, the great-great-granddaughter of Col. Cummins, and although the family had a sense of history within their genealogy, they were never involved. Now, the family travels to Remembrance Day on Nov. 19 in Gettysburg and they correspond with Sturtz often.

Although Sturtz has been getting back to the routine of his usual lifestyle in Somerset County, he foresees another movie extra part in the near future.

Sturtz says that Ron Howard is supposedly making a film of the Alamo and another Civil War film based on the book "Stone Mountain" is supposed to be in the works.

In the meantime, he will no doubt continue collecting Somerset County handcrafted items and already has some pieces in mind.

"Somerset County has a unique history," he said. "People moved through this county west. They may have stopped here for a night or longer but because of the military roads, Forbes Road and Braddock Road (Route 40),

Many passed through this area. The craftsmen here were creative and had an individual style. They expressed themselves in their work and that's one of the reasons I enjoy collecting items from this area. It might have been a farming community but there were artists here."

Anything Goes With Advertising Collectibles

Hard to believe but before the mid 1970s not only was the term "collectibles" still in the collecting closet, but people who collected the many items made to sell products were scoffed at. The mere idea of them coming to major auction houses and quality antique shows was unheard of. Since then they have had their financial ups and downs.

But, as in other collecting categories fine and rare examples will always find a buyer willing to pay big bucks.

The December Skinner auction that included many examples of advertising memorabilia proved the point with unusual pieces selling well over estimate and the more common pieces going for under estimate. An advertising regulator-style timepiece advertising Garfield tea and syrup, with a Seth Thome movement sold for $1,500 over an estimate of $800/1,200. Signs and cloth items were popular with bidders.

A Cascarets chromolithographic cloth banner depicting an African-American eating a watermelon sold well over the $1,000/1,500 for a whopping $3,250. Painted and chromolithographic metal signs and printed cloth pieces sold well over estimate.

Perhaps one reason it took advertising collectibles so long to be accepted is that advertising, as we know it, didn't really develop until the late 19th century. Before that products were sold by word of mouth and by signs hanging over stores and taverns with a symbol depicting what was for sale. The fish store had a fish and of course the barber shop had its' barber pole. 18th and 19th century examples have been collected over the years as a form of folk art. These days they cost thousands of dollars and are in major museums.

By the late 19th century colorful trade cards were on store counters and handed out by merchants. These were popular collectibles in their day and mounted in scrapbooks.

Antiques Detective Questions And Answers

I have a Chinese silver vase in the shape of a goblet trimmed with dragons. My father brought it from China in the 1920s. It is eight inches high. It is stamped "China" and has some marks I've been told stand for silver. What could it be worth?

S.L. — Atlanta, Ga.

Recently many 20th century Chinese silver pieces have been coming to auctions. Pieces similar to yours sell between $400 to $600.

This toy sports roadster has the figure of Olive Oyl molded into the top. It has the original box. The maker is Linemar. It is a friction toy. Any idea of value?

A.D. — Quincy, MA

Similar Linemar cartoon character friction toy cars, with original box can sell for over $600.

I am 80-years-old and my parents received this porcelain vegetable dish, with handles as a wedding gift. The border is in a Japanese design and the center has lotus designs. No mark on the bottom. Gold handles. Any idea of age, value, origins?

D.O. — Quincy, MA

Since you didn't mention any marker marks I assume there are none. Chances are it was made by a hobbiest during the hand-painted china craze that was popular in the early 20th century. It was also the time when Japanese motifs were popular. The porcelain blanks could have come from an American maker. It could sell in a shop for $75.

This picture is of a pair of bronzed metal bookends, with the seated figure of President Abraham Lincoln. Any idea of worth?

L.M.D. — Monponsett, MA

Your gilt painted, cast-iron bookends have a shop value of around $100.

I have been given assorted pieces of German china from World War II. It is creamy white with a blue-grey swastika on each piece. On the bottom is a name that appears to be Hubehermueller, ending in the word Gelb. Under it is a circle with an animal inside and the initials LHS. Any information would be helpful.

R.O.C. — South Weymouth, MA

Your china is certainly a collectors item. The actual maker is Hutschenreuther, in Selb (was Bavaria) Germany. They could have been made for officials in the Nazi party. As such they have historical as well as collector interest.

Antique Detective Questions And Answers

R.G. — Naples, FL

You didn't look long enough. It is Dresden, mid-19th century. One of the 30 factories in that area of Germany. You'll find the mark in Kovel's Dictionary of marks, page 96(A).

Can you tell me if this violin is of any value? Inside is a paper label: "Antonio Stradivarius Croinesis, Facie bac Anno 1721 Made in Czechoslovakia."

E.R. Emory, TX

Sorry to tell you your violin is one of the many copies sold in the 19th and early 20th century, in Europe and America, of famed violin maker Antonio Stradivarius. All the authentic pieces are known and registered. Your copy could sell for $200.

Can you evaluate this wine press used by my husband's grandparents to make wine. It is marked, "American Toys & Novelty Works, York, PA." Is there a market for it?

N.D.M. — Staten Island

There are many collectors of wines and wine memorabilia. It could sell in a shop for over $500...especially if it still works. Show your picture to dealers at one of the big antique shows, or run an ad.

What could this mantel clock with a statue on each side be worth? The figures are of two ancient, Grecian-type women, and they and the clock frame are made of pewter.

H.M.N. — Cape Coral, FL

Your 19th century lamp, made of spelter (a white metal) could sell at auction for $900 to $1,200.

I have a pair of tiles marked Minton. I think they depict characters from a Shakespeare play. What could they be worth?

E.S. — Chicago, Ill.

A similar pair, c.1860, sold at auction for $200.

zines and newspapers became in some cases an art form. Food and drug containers used art and product symbols to attract buyers. In the 1930s Log Cabin syrup was packaged in a colorful tin in the form of a log cabin. Bakers' cocoa had a Dutch costumed woman on their containers. At the same time pretty girls became a way to sell a product and were used on Coca Cola trays. These days the likeness of Colonel Sanders is used as an advertising symbol for Kentucky Fried Chicken.

Beginning collectors don't have to pay a fortune to start an advertising collection. The first thing is to zero in on a category such as food, tobacco, soft drinks, etc. Next time you are in a grocery store or a hotel gift shop see what catches your eye. I mention hotels because famous hotels such as The Plaza in New York have candy tins depicting the hotel facade.

Periodically you'll come across a country auction with cardboard cereal boxes dating back to the 1940s. Some people never throw anything out. Condition is all important as well as age. Cleaning products no longer being sold often had colorful advertising. Old Dutch Cleanser with the figure of a Dutch costumed woman, dating to the 1920s-1930s and Gold Dust cleanser with its' trade mark Afro-American twins, from the same era, could be the basis of a collection.

The fun of collecting advertising memorabilia is that you never know where you'll find it. Ashrays, figures and tearsheets are all worth collecting.

❖ BUSINESS NEWS ❖

Polaris Offers New Sportsman ATV

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Like a bull on a ranch, the Polaris Sportsman family has ruled the world of automatic transmission all-terrain vehicles (ATVs) since the company first flexed its muscles in the mid-80s. And now, a new Sportsman has taken the throne as king of the 4x4s. This fall, Polaris is introducing to every farmer and rancher the Sportsman 700 Twin, the most powerful and smoothest riding ATV available.

The most powerful four-wheeler on the market, the Sportsman 700 Twin is capable of doing the toughest work for an extended period of time. All agriculturalists will benefit by the 700's raw power - From re-positioning irrigation pipes, to hauling hay for the herd. With 20 percent more horsepower than the reigning champ, the Sportsman 500 H.O., and a mammoth towing capacity of 1500 pounds, the Sportsman 700 Twin can pull, carry and haul the heaviest of farming equipment over the toughest terrain.

"As ATVs become bigger and bolder, Polaris continues to lead the way by producing an ATV for farmers and ranchers with more power, endurance and maneuverability than all the rest," said Bennett Morgan, general manager, Polaris ATV Division. "The Sportsman 700 Twin truly represents the next generation of ATVs."

This muscle machine's strength is not its only impressive feature. Long travel suspension, high ground clearance and a tight turning radius makes the Sportsman 700 Twin the smoothest riding ATV on the market - perfect for riding through crop fields and over rough terrain on the ranch.

Deep Tillage Possible In Single Pass With Tillage Equipment

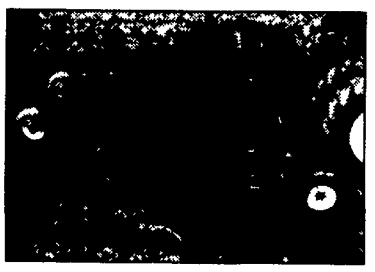
RACINE, Wis. — Maximizing cotton yield potential and profit by combining the yield increasing benefits of deep tillage with the lower production costs of fewer tillage passes is now available with the new DMI ecolo-bed'r™ 2500.

The ecolo-bed'r™ 2500 is the perfect combination of deep tillage and bed building for crops in areas where bedding is essential. In a single pass, the ecolo-bed'r™ 2500 tackles yield-deteriorating problems, such as compaction, while laying-up consistent, even beds that can be set either peaked or rounded.

"This machine and its features were developed to create a better seed bed for the cotton producer who wants to maximize the potential of every plant," says Kent Senf, DMI marketing manager, tillage. "The uniform soil flow throughout the ecolo-bed'r™ 2500 allows for better seed placement, improved seed-to-soil contact and more uniform beds and plant stands."

The ecolo-bed'r™ 2500 has 22-inch diameter flat coulters that operate at a uniform depth to cut and part residue and roots, which reduce residue wrapping around the shank and prevent bed blow-out. Additionally, both no-till and Minimum Residue Disturbance (MRD) shanks are available. The no-till shank and its patented point offer great soil fracture while maintaining uniform soil flow and bed consistency. the MRD shank with the patented tiger® point is the ideal choice when more soil disturbance is preferred.

The ecolo-bed'r™ 2500 comes equipped with a choice of either heavy-duty double-disc bedders or Lister points. The heavy-duty double-disc bedder is built to withstand the toughest conditions. The 20-inch diameter outside blades and 18-inch diameter inside blades can be adjusted to tailor the amount of soil movement and the type of bed desired. When positioned opposed from each other, the double-disc bedders throw peaked beds; when staggered, they throw more round beds. As an economical alternative or in sandy and abrasive soils, the ecolo-bed'r™ 2500 can be equipped with Lister points.



Designed to help cotton and vegetable producers maximize yield potential, the DMI ecolo-bed'r™ 2500 provides the perfect combination of deep tillage and bed building.

SNOW WOLF Ultra Series Heavy Duty Skid Loader Plows

Trip Cutting Edge Design
The SnowWolf Ultra features a trip cutting edge design which allows full down pressure for incredible scraping ability in forward or backdragging situations It eliminates "false tripping" from snow load and will only engage if you actually strike an immovable object

Massive Construction
The SnowWolf Ultra is designed to take abuse from the largest skid loaders. At approximately 100 pounds per foot of plowing width, you know the Ultra means business

Food for Thought
Did you know that a modern skid loader with a high speed transmission and a SnowWolf Ultra will outplow a pickup truck under most plowing conditions? A cleaner job, closer to the obstacles (without worrying about your fenders), and more acres plowed in the same amount of time!

GEHL. MODEL RB 2580 ROUND BALER 4'x5'

Featuring the ALL-NEW Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System

GREAT BALING STARTS HERE Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System Here's how it works. The incoming crop is pulled off the pickup by the aggressive action of two power in-feed rolls – a 6-inch-diameter pivoting power in-feed roll on top and an 8-inch diameter fixed power in-feed roll on the bottom

The top pivoting power in-feed roll rides over the crop as it is pulled into the bale chamber An extension spring keeps the toproll under constant downward force.

The spring tension increases as the variable throat opens from a minimum of 3/4 of an inch up to a maximum opening of nearly 7 inches

The constant downward force of the pivoting upper powered in-feed roll, in combination with the fixed lower in-feed roll, both turning inward, pinches the crop and forces it into the bale chamber The stripping roll strips crop off the belt and forces it down to the incoming crop Adjustable scrapers on the stripping roll and pivoting roll eliminate buildup

Twin Row Corn

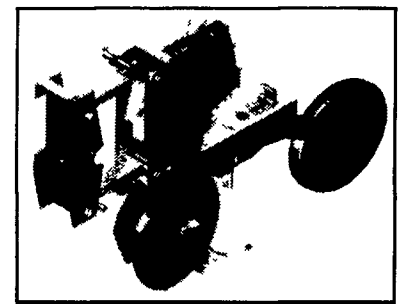
Great Plains

The Twin Row Corn Revolution is here!

In field trials nationwide, agronomists estimate that twin row 30" corn is providing substantially higher yields than traditional 30" corn. Twin row corn promises to be one of the most significant advancements in corn yields since the introduction of hybrid varieties.

The versatile Great Plains Precision Seeding System, available in 15' and 30' widths, is the ideal tool for twin row 30" corn, and will also plant beans, milo, cotton, wheat and rice. Before you buy your next planter or drill, check out the Seeding System that is revolutionizing crop production



The Ultra-Narrow Row Unit™ provides planter-style seed spacing and depth control on narrow 7½" rows

"I am very pleased with the Roto-Mix. It does a good job of processing dry, baled hay."

– Frank Graybill, Hershey, PA

When he decided to replace his old Artsway mixer, Mr. Graybill looked at several other brands besides Roto-Mix. The model 414 he bought from Lapp's Barn Equipment met his needs best.

Frank Graybill has a herd of 140 cows, milking 120. Herd average is 26,000 lbs., milking 3 times per day. Normal ration includes corn silage, haylage, high moisture corn, etc. Dry hay per feeding is 320 lbs. (5% of mix).

UD Launches Center For Farm Risk Management Education

NEWARK, Del. — Dr. H. Don Tilmon, cooperative extension specialist for farm management at the University of Delaware, has received a five-year, $3,235,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to launch the Northeast Center for Risk Management Education (NCRME).

The Center's purpose is to educate producers of agricultural products about the range of risk management opportunities available to them. The region served by the center includes the New England states, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware.

Tilmon says that until a few years ago farm risk management concentrated on crop insurance issues. That concept has been expanded to include anything that helps farms remain profitable.

"While crop insurance is still a big part of risk management education, it is not the only part," says Tilmon. "Educational outreach through our center will span the spectrum of socioeconomic, environmental, and health and safety issues for growers. We hope to offer programs on estate planning, federal standards, retirement, workers' compensation, hiring employees, futures and options, computer training — all the variables that go into running any well-managed business."

Tilmon divides risks to farm businesses into five categories: production risks, such as crop insurance, contracts and diversification; marketing risks, involving development of a marketing plan and use marketing tools; financial risks, including interest rates, liquidity and cash flow; human resources risks from managing employees; and legal risks associated with contractual arrangements, tort liability and environmental issues.

An advisory committee, comprised of Tilmon and five NCRME who are leaders in the agricultural community, will review grant proposals from the private sector and northeastern land-grant universities, then distribute project funds for agricultural education programs.

In addition to addressing risk management issues, the center will provide train-the-teacher workshops for county agents, extension specialists and people from the private sector who want to know more about risk management. The center's first project — a regional Website linked to the national library of information on risk management — is already well under way.

Tilmon and UD's College of Agriculture and Natural Resources were chosen to receive the grant over larger agricultural colleges, including those at Cornell, Penn State, University of Maryland and Rutgers University, based largely on Tilmon's reputation as a leader in the field of farm risk management.

The son of a sharecropper, Tilmon grew up in Missouri's Bootheel, located in the southeastern part of the state, where he learned firsthand the hardships of being a farmer. From an early age, he picked cotton by hand, an experience, he says, "you never forget." He credits this early experience with motivating him to earn a university degree. He received a bachelor's degree in animal science from the University of Missouri, a master's degree in management from the University of Delaware and a doctorate in marketing from Purdue University.

USDA Approves Use Of Activated Lactoferrin On Fresh Beef

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has approved the use of activated lactoferrin on fresh beef, providing beef processors with a revolutionary food safety technology that protects consumers from harmful bacteria.

Activated lactoferrin is an all-natural protein found in milk and dairy products. It has been shown to protect fresh beef against E. coli 0157:H7 and more than 30 different types of pathogenic bacteria, including Salmonella and Campylobacter. The technology is unique in that it prevents pathogenic bacteria from attaching to meat surfaces, growth.

"USDA approval is a significant milestone for activated lactoferrin and marks the final regulatory step needed to bring this food safety technology to market," said Eric Hale, president aLF Ventures, LLC, a partnership between Farmland National Beef Packing Company L.P. and DVM International.

According to Hale, activated lactoferrin will be available to beef processors worldwide who want to use the technology to improve the safety of their beef products.

Farmland National Beef, the in addition to preventing nation's largest producer-owned beef processor, expects to be the first company to offer fresh beef protected by activated lactoferrin, once final application systems development and testing is completed.

Cees de Jong, managing director of DMV International, said, "With this approval, we will now prepare to increase production of lactoferrin in anticipation of the consumer demand to be generated by activated lactoferrin. We are pleased we can help improve food safety for millions of consumers worldwide."

NFU Presents Annual Cooperative Service Awards

AURORA, Colo. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) has selected four individuals to receive Cooperative Service Awards for their leadership and service to farmer-owned cooperatives and rural economic development. This is the second year NFU has presented the awards.

"These individuals have shown great leadership and cooperative service to family farmers and ranchers by assisting in the development and start-up of new cooperatives and helping Farmers Union members develop value-added processing and marketing cooperative ventures," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "Their assistance in working with producers to secure necessary resources and apply appropriate economic development strategies has allowed farmers to advance their cooperatives and their rural communities. We commend them for their outstanding work."

The award recipients are:

- Dr. Mary Hendrickson, co-director, Food Circles Networking Project, University of Missouri-Columbia.
- Robyn "Bobbie" Morrison, cooperative loan specialist, USDA Rural Development, Michigan.
- Dean R. Stewart, manager, Guaranteed Loan Unit, USDA Rural Development, Alaska.
- Dallas Tonsager, rural business development consultant and former state director, USDA Rural Development, South Dakota.

Surveys Will Measure Farm Financial Health

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania farmers will have the opportunity to "let their voice be heard" by participating in the 2001 Agricultural Resource Management Study.

This study provides vital statistics about the economic condition of production agriculture. Most importantly, these statistics are used by members of the agricultural community and their legislators when making important decisions that impact the future of America's farmers and ranchers.

Data collected will present the only objective, true picture of the financial well-being of Pennsylvania farm operators and will be the last financial picture presented to Congress as they begin work on the next Farm Bill. These data are also a resource when policymakers determine Federal assistance. In 2000, direct government payments totaled $22.9 billion dollars.

Approximately 325 Pennsylvania agricultural producers have been chosen to participate in these surveys. Slightly more than 150 producers will receive a questionnaire specifically pertaining to corn producers in the Commonwealth. Participation in these surveys is a very important contribution to the overall welfare of Pennsylvania's farmers. All individual data collected are held strictly confidential by law (Title 7, U.S. Code). Only statistical totals are published for selected geographic regions and the Nation.

Farm Production Expenditures will be released July 18. For a copy of the finished report or to obtain other agricultural statistics, visit the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service Website at www.usda.gov/nass/.

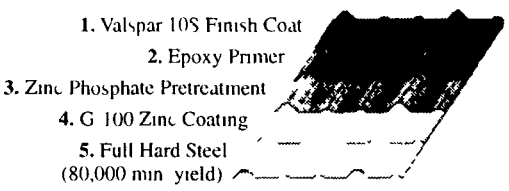
Everlast Roofing, Inc. Metal Roofing & Siding

The Ultimate G-100 Process

"The Best"



NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1 One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention

2 Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion

3 Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider

4 G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels

7 Stronger design superior strength more metal per L F

8 Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53 37 Per Square $1 69 Per L F

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY

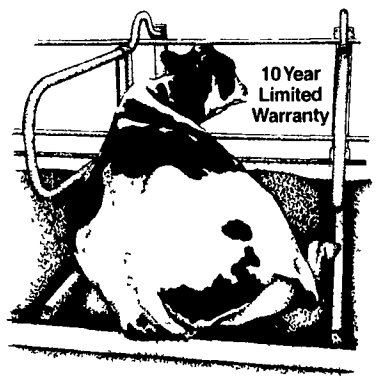
Waterbeds for Cows



ALANTA® A member of the LimPoly group of companies Forever Fencing

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

- SDSU tested
- Offered to growers for $1 55/per lb in 60 lb bags plus freight

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Join the numerous farmers in the PA/NY area harvesting wonderful alfalfa from South Dakota seed

Barenbrug Seed Company Offers Grass Seminar

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — Area graziers had the chance to attend a day of presentations on forage grasses and grazing here January 16.

Sponsored by Barenbrug seed company in cooperation with King's Agriseeds of Ronks, the seminar focused on the theme of "Better Grass For Ruminants."

Presenters included a dairy farmer from Northern Ireland; a Wisconsin nutritionist, farmer, and author; and local Barenburg representatives.

David Johnston of Northern Ireland — "home of the green, green grass," — gave an overview of the strongly grass-based dairy and beef industries there.

Farmers in his country view grazing as the most efficient use of all resources, according to Johnston.

"We look on our grass as a crop," he said.

He pointed out a study showing the cost of raising grassfed beef is about 17 percent of the cost of raising "housefed" beef in Northern Ireland.

Gary Zimmer of Wisconsin spoke on "Healthy soils, healthy grass, and healthy animals."

"In this country we've ignored soil mineral balance and supplemented everything (in the feed ration)," he said.

Aaron King of King's Agriseeds has been selling Barenbrug grass and legume forage seeds since 1993.

A dairy farmer, King told the group he believes in the seeds he offers.

"We try out the grasses on our own cows before we sell them," he said.

Barenbrug's seed company was founded in Holland in 1904.

30th National Agricultural Plastics Congress To Take Place In San Diego

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The American Society for Plasticulture (ASP) will host its 30th National Agricultural Plastics Congress on Feb. 23-26 at the Doubletree Hotel Mission Valley in San Diego, Calif.

The event will highlight the latest in the development, manufacturing, and utilization of plastic products in agricultural production systems, bringing together industry professionals from around the world.

The Congress will begin with a presentation from keynote speaker James J. Stapleton, Ph.D., entitled "Alternatives to Methyl Bromide Soil Fumigation: How Far Have We Progressed?" Methyl bromide soil fumigation is scheduled for total phase out in the U.S. and other developed countries in January of 2005. Dr. Stapleton's presentation will provide a progress report on current and projected alternatives, including chemical, biological, and/or physical treatment options for growers.

Dr. Stapleton, IPM plant pathologist with the University of California's statewide IPM project, is based at the UC Kearney Agricultural Center, near Fresno. He has more than 20 years research and extension experience with soil fumigation and fumigation alternatives.

Another highlight of the program is the presentation of technical reports from over 50 individuals from the academic community, manufacturing, and production enterprises, representing the U.S. and countries from around the world. Presentations will cover the latest in academic research, applied experiences, and product development research from educational institutions and the private sector.

Among the categories in which papers will be presented are crop production systems with plasticulture; drip irrigation and chemigation; flower and ornamental production; greenhouses and controlled environment agriculture; plastics technology and recycling of plastics; row covers, low tunnels, and high tunnels; small fruit production; solarization and fumigation; and vegetable production.

Tours will offer attendees the opportunity to witness past research put into practice. Concurrent tours showcasing agricultural production and plasticulture activities will be conducted on Tuesday, Feb. 26 as an addition to the Congress program.

Congress attendees will also have the opportunity to visit with plasticulture industry suppliers in the designated exhibit area. Various industry representatives will be on-site showcasing the newest and innovative products available to aid in the improvement of crop yields through plastics technology and production systems.

Not only an educational event, the Congress also serves as an opportunity for individuals in the plasticulture field to come together, network and forge new relationships with colleagues from around the world.

'Mountain Of Mums' Draws Customers To Ott's

SCHWENKSVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — What do you do with a mountain of soil?

Create the "Mountain of Mums," of course.

That's what happened beginning back in 1963, when earth was moved into a pile to build some greenhouses for Ott's Exotic Plans on Rt. 29 near Schwenksville.

The story goes, Godfrey Ott told his children, Godfrey H. and Clarke, to "go pull some weeds," out of a pile that had gone unsightly, said Godfrey H. Ott. Ott said that the weeds, being an eyesore, were replaced by some mums, and then pansies in the spring, for customers to appreciate.

So why not make a hill of yellows the color of lemonade, from an unsightly lemon?

"We made the dirt pile with plants," said Ott. "And

PHILADELPHIA — "Farmers wanted."

That's the rallying call of The Food Trust, a farmer's market association operating in the Philadelphia area.

The Farmer's Market Trust — as the organization was known until recently — was started 10 years ago at Philadelphia's Reading Terminal Market, according to Duane Perry, founder and executive director.

"The goal was to create farmer's markets operating in community settings," Perry said.

During the 2001 growing season, the nonprofit organization operated 10 markets in eight locations within Philadelphia and its suburbs.

Set up in a variety of settings such as sidewalks and parks, the markets are attracting a growing number of urban people who care about the sources of their food, said Perry.

"There's a really solid group of consumers interested in connecting with farmers," he said.

Twenty-seven farmers in 2001 supplied a wide array of agricultural products to the markets, from baked goods, cut flowers, and conventionally-grown fruits and vegetables to organic produce and specialty items such as "high end" salad greens.

Food Trust Matches Farmers With Customers, Local Communities

PHILADELPHIA — Mary Corboy lives in downtown Philadelphia and bikes regularly to the farm she manages.

From her home, the farm is a few dozen blocks away on an abandoned industrial or "brownfield" site in a residential neighborhood on the east side of the city, near Route 95.

"It was just a trash dump," Corboy said of the ¾-acre site before she took it over in 1998 and established the Greensgrow Philadelphia Project.

Made possible through a lease agreement with the local community development corporation, the project was started from scratch. No plumbing, electricity, or useful structures existed on the site — except for a metal wire fence around the perimeter of the property.

Originally started as a hydroponic operation for growing lettuce, Greensgrow has since expanded to include methods for cultivating a wide variety of crops including tomatoes, specialty vegetables, and flowers.

While "the mixed vegetable grower is the bread and butter of the markets," several farmers also offered home-grown meats and animal products, including beef, lamb, poultry, milk, eggs, and cheese, said Matthew Wright, market director.

Orchard fruits are the second top-selling category behind mixed vegetables, he said.

The Food Trust sets up markets in partnership with local community groups such as a Chamber of Commerce. Establishing a strong community connection results in a bond of loyalty between farmers and their customers, according to Wright.

"Neighborhoods really take ownership in the markets," he said. "People know each other by name."

Wright noted several cases in which locals have pitched in, helping farmers set up and manage their stands.

The excitement of a weekly farmer's market enhances the environment even in "unglamorous locations" and some of the markets "almost become a town center," Wright said.

The Trust strives to eliminate any worries that farmers may have about parking difficulties or the safety of marketing in urban settings.

"There's a lot of misperception about coming to market in an urban environment," Wright said. "Our role is to eliminate security and parking problems."

Perry said that farmers are matched to markets according to the type of products they offer, and are encouraged to go to multiple markets.

The direct marketing experience can be contagious, with many farmers committing to two or three markets

"Once they get involved, they get bit with the bug," he said.

Growers typically bring in from $500 to $800 for one morning or afternoon market, with some exceeding $1,000 per day during peak vegetable season, according to Perry.

However, it takes some time to garner a customer base that will bring maximum returns, Perry noted.

"New farmers (at the markets) should have reasonable expectations," he said. "Food shopping is habitual. It takes a long time to establish."

Farmers pay $32 per week to participate in one market. Additional markets are $24 per week, with the exception of "upscale" markets, which still require the higher fee, Perry said.

New markets slated to open for the 2002 season include one each in Telford, Phoenixville, and Norristown.

A $100 "reward" is being offered to anyone referring a farmer who signs up for a market.

The Food Trust partners with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, which helps the Trust underwrite advertisements and sponsor food programs such as those offered for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) and seniors.

The Food Trust also has an educational component, with a team working in schools to affect policy and provide information on nutrition, sustainable agriculture, and entrepreneurship.

Contact The Food Trust at (215) 568-0830 ext. 11, fax (215) 568-0882.

'Mountain Of Mums'

people went for it, so we made it bigger and bigger."

In 1972, the hill was expanded, almost to its present size at 700 feet around the base, and a tunnel was added. The Mountain of Mums stretches 45 feet high, with three sets of steps and a "promenade" deck, of sorts, at the top.

In the fall, the hill is literally covered with 8,000 mum plants with 50 different varieties, all for sale at the greenhouse. They are planted the first week of July with 3-inch pots.

Because of the slope of the hill, "they're easy to plant," said Ott, "if we work real good. It takes about 25 hours to plant," he said, with the help of about three people working 8-10 hours.

The plants are nurtured on potting soil consisting of peat moss, sterilized soil, and fertilizer, "our mix," said Ott. "Some people are here just to get the potting soil."

The soil is easy to care for and the plants "grow fast," said Ott. About 40,000 individual blooms light up the mountain on a dazzling fall day. The mountain is open until hard freeze.

The mountain is covered about four times in the fall for frost protection. The greenhouse uses a white cover made in Georgia. The material is lightweight, weighing only 150 pounds, but provides about eight degrees of temperature difference. About six people, with the help of an overhead crane. get the job done.

In the spring, pansies are planted on the mountain, about four seedlings in a six-inch pot on 15-18 inch centers. They put about 20,000-25,000 pots in, encompassing about 100,000 plants.

At the top of the mountain, near the end of the lane, is a lookout-type structure containing four pillars of PVC pipe. The plants are drip-fed through the PVC type, forming a column covering.

Ott's Exotic Plants, located on Rt. 29 a few miles above Collegeville, was established at a nearby location in 1935. The Ott brothers, Godfrey H. and Clarke, run the business, with assistance from about 10 full-tine and two part-time employees.

The greenhouse, which has about 60,000 square feet of space, is open every day of the week and on every holiday except Christmas. For more information, call Ott's at (610) 287-7878.

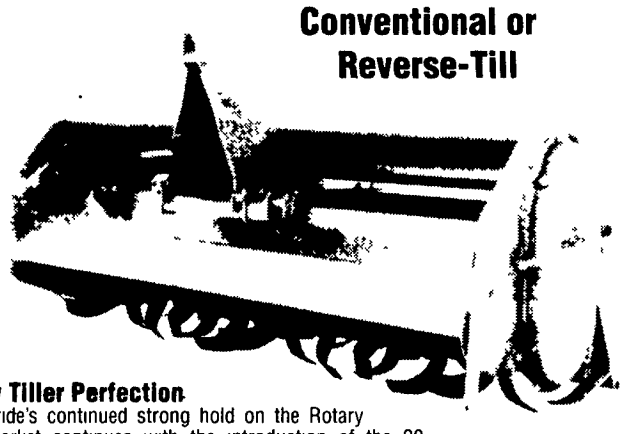
20 Series Rotary Tillers



Conventional or Reverse-Till

Rotary Tiller Perfection
Land Pride's continued strong hold on the Rotary Tiller market continues with the introduction of the 20 Series line of tractor mounted Tillers. Available in three widths, this eye appealing Rotary tiller effortlessly turns up hard packed ground, leaving a perfect seedbed for gardens to grass.

Forward or Reverse Tilling
Various conditions can demand various tilling methods. Land Pride's RTA20 Series Rotary Tillers are available with a forward rotating tilling action. The forward rotating tiller can work in all types of ground conditions, with best results being obtained in fairly mellow conditions.

The RTR20 Series Rotary Tillers feature a reverse tilling action for tougher ground conditions. Able to perform superbly in all types of soil or ground cover, the reverse rotation of the tiller tines tackle tough ground with ease. The reverse action 'sucks' the tiller into the ground, which prohibits the tiller from 'walking' on hard ground.

The RTR20 Series Tiller also incorporates spring loaded 'shifting' rods behind the tines to help bury large rocks and debris. The reverse action of the rotor brings material up and over the top. Rocks and vegetation cannot get through the sifting rods so they fall first. Soil continues to get sifted before it falls, building a layer of large to small dirt clods burying the rocks and vegetation. Reverse tilling can reduce the number of trips needed to turn the soil over!

Food Trust Matches Farmers

In addition to Corboy, two fulltime workers plan, build, plant, tend, and harvest there throughout the normal growing season and beyond.

Higher temperatures in the city along with two greenhouses and a high tunnel constructed on the site extend the period for plants to grow. In the first week of January, Corboy reported that the spinach was still being harvested. The tomatoes quit producing around Christmas, she said.

Fresh produce from Greensgrow is sold directly to restaurants in downtown Philadelphia. "The entire delivery route is less than 10 miles," Corboy said.

Greensgrow also serves to connect urban neighbors with agriculture. According to Corboy, about 2,000 people toured the site in 2001.

"This is a way for people in the city to actually see food being grown," she said, noting that many of the visitors are kids.

"I want them to understand what I'm doing. Maybe they want to become a farmer," she said.

While Greensgrow has received some funding from several local foundations and the USDA for new projects, the ultimate goal of the operation is to turn a profit by innovation and "all the things that a regular small farm does to survive."

Corboy and the other workers build raised soil beds out of a mixture of clean fill, compost, "spent" mushroom soil, and horse manure — happily provided by the managers of the stables downtown that house the city's numerous carriage horses.

Their first raised beds had water retention problems, according to Corboy.

"We were having a terrible time (from lack of drainage)," she said.

Mat Brener, an agricultural engineer with a special interest in urban ag, suggested rebuilding the beds with a drainage system. He helped secure a grant from the Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) arm of the USDA to work on it.

Brener's drainage project involved installing perforated PVC pipe surrounded by crushed stone under the 15 inches of soil in the raised bed.

Although the original soil may still be contaminated with heavy metals from a galvanized steel plant that used to operate there before it was closed down in the 1970s, Greensgrow has developed, and continues to develop, ways to grow safe food on the site.

The beds were constructed on existing concrete pads, which serve as a barrier from the contaminated soil underneath. In areas without a concrete base, a plastic fabric is laid on top of the crushed stones before the beds are built on top of them.

Corboy has sent leaf samples from plants grown on the site to Penn State to have them tested for heavy metal content. The tests have shown no harmful substances in the plant tissues, she said.

Rural Connections

Corboy, a former chef, hopes that a working partnership between Greensgrow and the Philadelphia Fair Food Project will result in the development of marketing cooperatives consisting of rural and urban farmers.

This Neighborhood Urban Ag Cooperative (NUAC) mission is to train people to become urban farmers and to link rural producers of fruits, vegetables, meats and other farm commodities with their urban counterparts.

Such a cooperative would enhance the marketing power of both groups, Corboy said. Rural producers would help supply a complete line of farm fresh, healthy foods to city markets, while their urban partners would provide easier connections to those markets and a greater awareness of food trends.

Fresh commerce at Clark Park Farmers' Market at 43rd and Baltimore Streets in West Philadelphia.

The city's potential is great for other projects similar to Greensgrow, according to Corboy. The local New Kensington community development corporation alone has 72 abandoned industrial sites that could possibly be turned into farms, with many other such brownfields existing throughout the city, she pointed out.

Corboy envisions a smorgasboard of urban farms offering a variety of fresh produce and community supported agriculture (CSA) shares to people from the neighborhood. Some of those farms could specialize in ethnic foods suitable to their location.

All of this would help "give people in the city some say and some control of their own food production," she said.

"We see our advocacy role as getting city and state to recognize this is a good use for abandoned land."

Corboy acknowledged the help and support of Penn State on various projects including plasticulture and greenhouse tomato production.

She is looking for more urban ag enthusiasts.

"I don't want to be the only farmer in Philadelphia," she said.

Mid-Atlantic Orchard Monitoring Guide Helps Ensure Fruit Quality

ITHACA, N.Y. — Tree fruit growers must make many decisions regarding all aspects of fruit production in the face of increasing global competition.

To maintain profitability, growers must know how to monitor orchards, make sound decisions, and take timely action in managing the complex agroecosystem of an orchard.

A book that provides the background and instruction necessary for an effective orchard monitoring program is the "Mid-Atlantic Orchard Monitoring Guide," NRAES-75.

Published by NRAES (the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service) in 1995, "Mid-Atlantic Orchard Monitoring Guide," NRAES-75, ($48), is a comprehensive regional guide intended for fruit growers, consultants, chemical field representatives, and research and extension personnel. The guide is 370 pages long and includes 13 chapters, 18 appendixes, 322 full-color photos, 13 figures, 26 tables, a glossary, and a references section.

Chapters 1 through 9 contain basic information about insects and mites, diseases, nematodes, weeds, frost monitoring, irrigation scheduling, wildlife, nutrition, and fruit. This section of the guide provides background information on the production components for which monitoring is essential.

Chapters 10 through 13 focus on the components of orchard monitoring: equipment and supplies; plan and schedule; evaluation; and record keeping. A unique feature of the monitoring plan and schedule is the division of each tree fruit into six or seven periods of the season. At each stage, procedures and thresholds are specified for all items to be monitored. Chapter 12 provides instruction in conducting a postharvest assessment of fruit quality and discusses the economics of orchard monitoring. Chapter 13 explains the use of tables and record-keeping forms contained in the appendix.

"Mid-Atlantic Orchard Monitoring Guide," NRAES-75, was written by 37 fruit researchers and extension specialists from land grant universities in Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia, as well as researchers from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the USDA Leadership for the publication was provided by West Virginia University.

The publication was edited by Henry Hogmire Jr., professor of entomology and extension specialist with the West Virginia University Tree Fruit Research and Education Center in Kearneysville, W.Va.

"Mid-Atlantic Orchard Monitoring Guide," NRAES-75, is available for $48 per copy, plus shipping and handling, from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. The shipping and handling charge for one copy is $5.50 within the continental U.S. New York residents, add eight percent sales tax.

Guide Focuses On Commercial Perennial Production

ITHACA, N.Y. — At last, a publication about growing perennial plants for commercial production.

In "Herbaceous Perennials Production: A Guide from Propagation to Marketing" ($27), Dr. Leonard Perry of the University of Vermont Cooperative Extension System has created a book that will interest novice and experienced commercial growers, advanced hobbyists, and floriculture and horticulture students.

"Herbaceous Perennials Production" is a comprehensive information source that considers the diversity of situations encountered by growers in businesses of all sizes. The 220-page book maintains a focus on production and contains information that until now was available only in piecemeal form. It discusses the basics — such as taxonomy and nomenclature, plant hardiness, the physical needs of crops, and types of irrigation systems — as well as cutting-edge, research-based information about perennial propagation and production. The focus is on nursery and greenhouse production of field or container perennials, but the greenhouse plug and bedding plant methods of production are covered as well.

Key chapters in the book discuss production systems and schedules, propagation (including media, nutrients, environmental requirements, and methods), plug production, transplant and seedling care, nursery and field production, and pest control (including deer and small animals). A chapter about forcing out-of season bloom includes up-to-date information about research on this topic as well as a table of specific forcing requirements for over 120 perennial species and cultivars. Practical discussions about starting a business, marketing and customer service, setting prices for plants, and designing a production facility are included as well.

"Herbaceous Perennials Production: A Guide from Propagation to Marketing," NRAES-93, is available for $27 per copy (plus shipping and handling) from NRAES (Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service), Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. Shipping and handling for one copy is $5.50 within the continental U.S. New York residents, add eight percent sales tax.

INSECT AND DISEASE MANAGEMENT IN VEGETABLE TRANSPLANTS

Pest management for vegetable transplant production is an integrated process and includes sanitation, sound cultural practices, the use of resistant cultivars (where possible), and finally, proper use of the correct pesticide.

Your pest management program should be starting now in the greenhouse. Begin the season with a clean, weed-free disinfected greenhouse. This means clearing the growing area of any plant debris, weeds, and any discarded flats or tools. After cleanup, wash and disinfect empty benches, potting areas, storage shelves, tools, and leftover cell packs and flats that you plan to reuse.

Your disinfecting solution can contain any of the sanitizing products such as Green-Shield, Physan 20, Triathlon, Zero Tol, or chlorine bleach (10 percent solution). Be sure to follow the manufacturer's directions when using any commercially prepared materials.

If you are using a 1 to 9 bleach solution, remember that it requires a 30-minute soak in order to be effective. Also, while chlorine bleach is an effective sanitizer, please note that there will be a 50 percent reduction in strength of a chlorine solution after just two hours. Therefore, you should prepare a new solution each time you plan to sanitize. This includes a new solution after lunch if you started working in the morning.

Once you have the growing area and equipment sanitized, be sure to avoid recontamination. Dirty hose nozzles or tools can contaminate potting soil and the general growing area. Be sure that everything brought into the area is clean! The floor or soil in the growing area is a good source of insects and diseases. Do not stand on the benches after they have been cleaned as you can easily move diseases up from the floor on your shoes. Use hooks to keep your hose nozzle off the floor. Ideally, grow your transplants off the floor as well, either on benches or pallets.

The floor in your greenhouse should be well drained and cleaned before plants are started there. Some growers have taken to covering the entire floor with black fiber cloth to both prevent weed growth and make clean up easier after transplant production. Once dry, plant and soil residues are easily swept-up and removed.

Does your growing area have good air movement? Circulating air not only distributes heat more evenly but can also reduce condensation in the greenhouse. Consider installing a horizontal air flow (HAF) system in your transplant production area.

I've heard growers ask if allowing the greenhouse to "freeze" for several days in cold weather means that insect pests will be killed. No, according to Alan Michael, our regional ornamental specialist. Heat is much more effective for pest destruction.

For example, heat has been shown to be more effective for the control of thrips, according to Leanne Pundt of the University of Connecticut. In one study, high temperature (104 degrees F) combined with very low humidity (less than 10 percent) for three to four days killed most adult thrips. However, your greenhouse must be completely weed-free for this method to work.

If you have constant thrips problems, this control method might be something to try this summer.

Finally, always use disease-free media for transplant production. If using soil, be sure it is pasteurized before you bring it into the growing area. Successful soil pasteurization requires 30 minutes at 180 degrees F. Be sure to frequently sanitize and maintain clean areas where soil is mixed and pots are filled. Ideally, you will have separate areas if you are producing both vegetable transplants and ornamentals. Bringing cuttings of flowering plants into the vegetable area can introduce pests such as thrips and diseases such as tobacco spotted wilt virus (TSWV). Look at your available space(s) and plan accordingly.

Proper disease control in the greenhouse starts with correct identification of the cause of the problem. The symptoms caused by diseases can also be caused by poor cultural practices. Chemicals cannot control problems caused by improper crop management, so it is important that you follow good cultural techniques.

Consider using seed treatments to control root diseases and/or some bacterial diseases. Seed treatments are either preventative or eradicative. Preventative treatments are intended to protect the seed from decay and soil-borne fungi. Eradicative treatments are intended to kill harmful organisms on or in the seed. Be sure to follow recommended procedures when using eradicative treatments as these procedures can also reduce germination or even kill the seeds you are treating.

Root diseases can be controlled by using fungicides as a soil drench. Always read and follow the directions on the label of any fungicide you are using. Frequently, a fungicide applied to the soil surface will need to be watered in to be effective. For foliar diseases, complete coverage of all leaf surfaces (top and bottom) is necessary for successful control. Good scouting practices and early treatment of disease infestations will result in reduced plant loss and better overall control.

Another important disease control practice is to reduce the relative humidity in the greenhouse, especially during the evening when cooler temperatures might result in water droplets forming on the leaf surfaces. Run your exhaust fans for a few minutes to force warm, humid air out of the greenhouse and replace it with cooler, drier outside air. Then heat the cooler air to reduce the humidity inside the greenhouse. You may need to repeat this procedure two or three times per hour after the sun sets and again at sunrise. This will raise your heating costs somewhat but what will it cost you if you lose all of your vegetable transplants to disease, especially close to planting time?

Good scouting practices will also help you detect and control insect infestations in your transplants before the problem becomes severe. Again familiarize yourself with the symptoms of insect infestations as well as the life cycles of the pest you are likely to encounter such as thrips, aphids, mites and fungus gnats. Use sticky cards to monitor for adult thrips, aphids, and fungus gnats. Actual plant inspections are also necessary, particularly to detect mites and immature whiteflies. Examine plants at 10 locations per 1,000 square feet of greenhouse weekly. Each time you scout, start at a different location in your growing area.

Chemical controls are frequently needed to control insect pests in vegetable transplants. Be sure you have identified the pest correctly and selected a material labeled to control that pest. While there are not as many choices for insect pest control in a greenhouse as there are for field situations, there are still several choices for each pest that allow you to choose what will work best in your situation. This includes "softer" materials that will help preserve natural predators you may be using.

As always, be sure to thoroughly read the label and follow the directions for any insecticide you use for pest control.

Remember, disease and insect pest control for vegetable transplant production starts before any plants are in the greenhouse. Waiting until seeding time to start this chore may not leave enough time to do the job thoroughly. Once the transplants are growing in the greenhouse, regular scouting is necessary to detect pest outbreaks and control them before they become major infestations. Attention to detail throughout the process of vegetable transplant production should help you have healthy, vigorous plants to get your crop off to a good start in the field.

Making Money In New Millennium Is Convention Theme

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Agricultural sustainability depends on the farmer's ability to make a profit. To do so, fruit and vegetable growers need the latest information on growing techniques, pest control, nutrition, marketing, and business management.

There is no better place for growers in the Mid-Atlantic region to learn how to make money in the new millennium than at the 2002 Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center Jan. 29-31.

About 2,000 people, mostly fruit and vegetable growers, from throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, and other states are expected to gather.

The Great American Hall at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center will host the Trade Show with over 130 exhibitors. Specialized horticultural equipment, farm market merchandise, and packaging, will all be on display along with information on the latest seed varieties, fruit varieties, pesticides, and other supplies and services for the commercial grower.

Six or more concurrent educational sessions will be offered on all three days of the convention.

The following sessions are planned for the morning of the first day: tree fruits, marketing, season extension technology, basic vegetable production, cole crops, snap beans, peppers, and wine grapes. In the afternoon, sessions on tree fruits, wholesale marketing, greenhouse vegetables, sweet corn, organic production, potatoes, and wine grapes will be offered.

On the second day, full-day sessions will include information on peaches, tree fruits, direct marketing, greenhouse ornamentals (bedding plants and perennials), and potatoes. In addition, half-day sessions on irrigation, general vegetables, small fruit, and melons/cukes will be conducted.

The convention will close on the third day with full-day sessions on tree fruits, small fruit, tomatoes (covering both fresh and processing topics), and cut flowers. Half-day sessions are offered on peaches, pumpkins, fall ornamentals, and general vegetables.

Pesticide applicator update training credits are available to growers attending the sessions. The program covers nearly every aspect of fruit, vegetable, potato, and small fruit production.

On Jan. 29, fruit and vegetable growers will be treated to a reception followed by the annual fruit and vegetable growers dinner. The dinner will include awards, recognitions, and entertainment by the Biglerville High School Jazz Band.

On Jan. 31, the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Board and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association will each sponsor receptions for growers. The processing tomato growers with the highest yields for the 2001 season will be honored at the annual Tomato Awards Luncheon on the closing day, Jan. 31.

For more information on the fruit program and registration, contact Maureen Irvin, State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, (717) 677-4184; William Tietjen, New Jersey State Horticultural Society, (908) 475-6505; Robert Black, Maryland State Horticultural Society, (301) 271-7491.

For more information on the vegetable, potato, or greenhouse ornamental program and registration, contact William Troxell, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, (717) 694-3596.

The event is jointly sponsored by the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, the Maryland State Horticultural Society, and the New Jersey State Horticultural Society.

Persons registered for either the fruit or vegetable program can attend all the sessions offered (fruit, vegetable, and small fruit sessions) plus the trade show. Registration either through the mail or at the door is required to attend both the trade show and educational sessions.

Updated Book Teaches Energy Conservation For Commercial Greenhouses

ITHACA, N.Y. — Profitability in greenhouse production can be improved by finding ways to conserve energy. Advanced greenhouse design principles, better glazings and insulating materials, energy blankets, improved heating and ventilating systems, and new management methods have made today's greenhouses much more energy efficient than those only a few years old.

"Energy Conservation For Commercial Greenhouses" ($17) is a newly revised, highly practical book that reviews the merits and limitations of current energy-conservation strategies for commercial greenhouses. Written by John W. Bartok Jr., an authority on greenhouses for more than 30 years, the 84-page book contains 10 chapters, 53 illustrations, 26 tables, and equations and calculation examples to help greenhouse operators find ways to conserve energy and thus save money. The book will be of interest to anyone who is constructing a new greenhouse, considering renovating an existing greenhouse, or simply looking to increase energy conservation and efficiency in daily greenhouse operation.

Topics covered in the book include principles of heat loss, site selection and modification, construction materials, insulation, fuels and heating, ventilation and cooling, space utilization, utilities, strategies for reducing trucking costs, and managing for efficiency. Four appendixes complete the text: an energy conservation checklist, heat loss calculations, selected product manufacturers and distributors, and useful conversions.

This book is a revision of the 1989 version of "Energy Conservation For Commercial Greenhouses." Information has been updated to reflect current trends and technology, including hinged roofs, ebb-and-flood irrigation, boom watering, controllers, and computers. The three chapters on utilities, trucking costs, and management are new in this revision. New tables and illustrations have been added as well.

The 2001 revision of "Energy Conservation For Commercial Greenhouses," NRAES-3, was published by NRAES, the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service. It was written by John W. Bartok Jr., an extension professor emeritus and agricultural engineer with the Natural Resources Management and Engineering Department at the University of Connecticut-Storrs.

The 2001 revision of "Energy Conservation For Commercial Greenhouses," NRAES-3, is available for $17 per copy, plus shipping and handling, from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. Shipping and handling for one copy is $3.75 within the continental U.S. New York residents, add eight percent sales tax (calculated on both the cost of the book and shipping and handling charges.) If ordering more than one copy or if ordering from outside the U.S., contact NRAES for shipping rates and possible quantity discounts.

TOUGH & NIMBLE

When Gull Waddell isn't using his AGCO ST45 compact tractor to mow grass or haul round bales on his 25-acre horse ranch, he's putting it to work as owner of GTW Landscaping in Rougemont, NC

"With the price of gas the way it is, I don't want to be towing a 5,000- to 7,000-pound tractor around on a trailer," he says. "That's one reason I like the AGCO compact so well. It has enough power and weight to handle heavy 3-point hitch implements; yet it's light enough to haul around on the job."

With an engine horsepower rating of 44.1 and shipping weight of more than 3,700 pounds, the ST45 is the heavyweight powerhouse of compact tractors. To learn more about the productivity, reliability and operator comfort that only an AGCO ST series tractors can provide, stop by and see us today

Entomologist Is Medfly Detective

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Clementines — a popular seasonal citrus fruit similar to tangerines — may be in short supply after the USDA's recent ban on Spanish clementine imports.

The ban is in response to the discovery of Mediterranean fruit fly larvae in fruit imported to the U.S. from Spain, which supplies about 75 percent of the U.S. clementine market.

Meanwhile, an entomologist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences is working with USDA to pinpoint the source of the latest infestations, with an eye toward eliminating potential avenues for the pest's introduction.

Bruce McPheron, professor of entomology, is analyzing DNA from medflies intercepted in Baltimore, Detroit, and New Orleans to determine their geographic origin.

"By identifying the source of the infestation, we hope to accomplish two things," said McPheron, whose laboratory does genetic fingerprinting for all medfly interceptions in North America on behalf of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. "First, we want to make sure that there's no established population of medflies in the U.S. Second, if we know where they're coming from, we can close inspection loopholes to eliminate their pathways, as well as improve production practices and postharvest treatment to reduce the threat.

'Medflies present no threat to human health," said McPheron. "If consumers in Pennsylvania or other northern states find larvae in a clementine this winter, they can just throw it away or return it to the store so that officials can be contacted to identify the larvae.

"The real threat is to the fruit and vegetable industries in states where the weather is warm enough for the pest to become established," McPheron said. "In Pennsylvania, for instance, there's no fruit on the trees now to support medfly reproduction, and the adults wouldn't survive the cold winter weather."

In addition to the suspension of clementine imports, USDA has banned their sale or distribution in 17 states where medflies could survive. Shipments to those states can be destroyed or redirected to be sold in approved cold-weather states.

Mediterranean fruit flies are one of the world's most destructive agricultural pests. They can infest more than 250 varieties of fruits and vegetables. Female medflies lay eggs under the skin of ripening fruit. After hatching, the larvae eat the pulp, rotting the fruit.

Reduced fruit quality, lost markets, increased use of pesticides and other costs associated with medflies could total in the billions of dollars for growers. The citrus industries in California and Florida spend millions of dollars annually to prevent and monitor for infestations. Damage done by the pest could reduce fruit and vegetable supplies, leading to higher consumer prices.

When suspected infestations are discovered, experts in the field first identify the larvae as medflies, then send specimens to Penn State for DNA analysis. "Genetic markers help us to determine whether an infestation is the result of a new introduction or the resurgence of an old one that had been reduced to undetectable levels by eradication efforts," said McPheron, whose medfly research has taken him virtually around the world collecting specimens.

Before importation, fruit typically is quarantined in cold storage or fumigated with methyl bromide to eliminate exotic pests. But McPheron said methyl bromide is being phased out because of environmental concerns and an effective alternative hasn't been identified. "The fact that we've seen such a geographically widespread introduction suggests some kind of breakdown in the quarantine system for fruit coming from Europe," he said.

Herbicide-Treated Mulches Effective Method Of Weed Control

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Mulches pretreated with herbicides have been found to be an effective method of weed control on ornamental plants grown in nursery or landscape settings.

The results of an Ohio State University study to measure the productivity of herbicide-treated mulches on weed control and plant toxicity have shown that certain organic mulches pretreated with herbicides produced near-perfect weed control and showed minimal phytotoxicity up to 130 days after application.

Such results are beneficial to landscape and nursery industries since the efficacy of pre-emergent herbicides would be extended, reducing the need for repeated chemical applications over the course of a growing season.

The research is being funded by the Horticultural Research Institute, the Ohio Research Endowment, the USDA and several nurseries in the Dayton/Springfield area.

Hannah Mathers, an Ohio State University nursery and landscape specialist, said the pretreated mulches provided better control than mulches or herbicides applied directly to the soil or plant and lasted longer than the normal 45-day herbicide application.

"The mulches treated with herbicides had a 1.5 fold increase over herbicide applications by themselves and a 1.8 fold increase over mulches by themselves," said Mathers. "That's a pretty significant result. There's something going on there where the two together gives superior efficacy over mulches or chemicals alone."

The researchers studied the performance of seven organic mulches (pine nuggets, cypress, Douglas fir, hardwood bark, rice hulls, cocoa bean shells, and PennMulch — a recycled palletized paper product) treated with two herbicides (Surflan and Flumioxazin — not yet registered for ornamentals) on various broad-leaved evergreens, conifers and deciduous shrubs.

Weed control was given a visual rating of zero to 10, with a "10" providing perfect weed control. Plant toxicity was also ranked from zero to 10, with a zero indicating perfect plant health. Herbicide was applied to a 15 square foot area of a single layer of mulch using the same field application rates required in the nursery and landscape industries.

Based on the results, rice hulls and hardwood bark treated with either Surflan or Flumioxazin provided the best weed control with minimal toxicity to the plants. "For example, at 45 days the pretreated hardwood had a perfect '10' in weed control and a '2.1' in phytotoxicity. Anything below a '3' for phytotoxicity is considered commercially acceptable," said Mathers.

Other pretreated mulches, like pine nuggets, also appeared to outshine the performance of stand-alone mulches and herbicides. "A half-rate of Surflan on pine nuggets brought phytotoxicity down lower than even half of what would normally be applied with a chemical by itself," said Mathers. "Pine nuggets performed well with Surflan providing almost as effective weed control as hardwood bark or rice hulls."

Researchers speculate the herbicides bind to the mulches, creating a slow-release carrier that not only improves upon weed control and reduces plant toxicity, but also produces a more environmentally sound product by reducing leaching.

"Most of the chemical that is applied directly onto plants leaches away because of its water solubility," said Mathers. "So much of it leaches away through pots that you may apply 100 percent of the chemical but you have only about 30 percent of the actual chemical to do anything with. The rest is just lost." In the landscape the chemical leaches into the environment as run-off. In nursery production, lost chemicals are the result of improper calibration and run-off from plastic or gravel, which increases the need for multiple applications.

Mathers and graduate students Luke Case and Nathan Tuttle plan to study exactly where the majority of the herbicide that is applied to the mulch resides, whether it's in the mulch, within the plant soil or at the bottom of the container.

"If we can scientifically show that the chemicals are binding to the mulches, then we have a product that can be applied to plants and we won't have to worry about any leaching into water sources," said Mathers. "Also, a product that can give you weed control for a whole season is a big deal to a landscape maintenance company. If you can guarantee total weed control to your customers, it makes you look good and that's good business."

Latest Apple Handling, Storage Research In New Book

ITHACA, N.Y. — Proper handling and storage of apples helps ensure the freshness and availability of quality fruit throughout most of the year.

Each apple variety has unique characteristics and susceptibilities and, therefore, requires unique handling and storage methods.

As new apple varieties are developed and some existing varieties become resistant to fungicides, researchers continue to seek the most effective handling and storage methods for each one.

A new publication, "Apple Handling and Storage," NRAES-153 ($19.50) — the proceedings from "Storage Workshop 2001: Apple Handling and Storage," at Cornell University in August 2001 — combines into a single resource the latest research in apple handling and storage methods.

"Apple Handling and Storage" includes 11 papers: "Understanding the Bitter Pit Problem in Honeycrisp;" "Understanding the Soft Scald Problem in Honeycrisp;" "Decay and Quality Problems at the Retail Level;" "Protocol for Empire Apples Exported from Great Lakes Growing Region to UK Markets;" "Food Safety Programs: A Common Sense Approach;" "Postharvest Decay without Fungicides;" "Controlled Atmosphere Systems for 2001 and Beyond;" What Do New York Results Tell Us about the Future of MCP?;" "1-Methylcyclopropene: Is It the Answer? (Perspectives from Apple Research in Ontario);" "The Grow New York Project: MCP Effects on Apples;" and "Application Technology for 1-MCP."

The research presented in this proceedings will be helpful not only to apple growers but also to packers, storage operators, horticulturists, fruit and vegetable scientists, and agricultural engineers.

"Apple Handling and Storage," NRAES-153, is available for $19.50 per copy, plus shipping and handling, from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. Shipping and handling for one copy is $3.75 within the continental U.S. New York residents, add eight percent sales tax.

Shrub Rose Versatility Appealing To Flower-Lovers

WOOSTER, Ohio — If you ask somebody to name their favorite flower, they will most likely tell you the rose.

Fossil records of naturally occurring rose species have dated back to 35 million years. More than 150 wild species still exist in nature and cultivated roses from old garden roses to modern hybrid teas have enjoyed a long history — about 5,000 years.

"Roses are irresistible. There's something about them that people love," said Gary Anderson, an Ohio State University horticulturist for the Agricultural Technical Institute in Wooster, Ohio. "There's just a lot of lore, romance and history behind roses."

Anderson helped maintain that appeal for roses at the 73rd Annual Ohio State University Nursery Short Course, Jan. 21-23 at the Greater Columbus Convention Center in Columbus, Ohio.

The program, in conjunction with the Central Environmental Nursery Trade Show (CENTS), is the third-largest event of its kind in the country that provides nursery, landscape and greenhouse professionals plant selection and maintenance information, pest and disease management tips, economic advice and research results.

"People are always looking for plants that don't require a lot of work," said Anderson. "Shrub roses perform successfully because they don't require as much pruning or pesticide applications as other roses."

Shrub roses are also versatile in appearance and style, with a wide variety of flower colors to choose from, and fit well in a variety of landscape settings — as ground cover, in flowerbeds, or supported by a trellis or a fence.

"Shrub roses grow much more vigorously than other rose types," said Anderson. "They also have a more shrub-like appearance, which gives them a more natural look. I think people want to return to that look and that's what makes them so appealing."

For more information on the program call (614) 895-1356, or (800) 825-5062 or log on to http://webgarden.osu.edu/ or http://www.onla.org.

Christmas Tree Management Short Course Feb. 13-14

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's 2002 Christmas Tree Management Short Course will be at The Penn Stater Conference Center Hotel in University Park, Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 13-14.

Sponsored by the College of Agricultural Sciences' department of horticulture, the course attracts growers from Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, New Jersey and beyond.

The course is designed to help Christmas tree growers adopt the latest pest control, production and business management practices, according to Rick Bates, co-chair and assistant professor of ornamental horticulture. Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture pesticide recertification core and category credits will be available.

Wednesday sessions will focus on pest management and issues related to farming in high-population areas. Highlights include reducing deer damage, weed and disease control, pesticide safety, and challenges and opportunities of farming on the urban fringe. An afternoon workshop for new growers and employees will cover production basics.

Thursday sessions will feature business management, insect control and cultural practices. Topics include nursery inspection and regulations, shearing, controlling insects, soil fertility, managing Canaan fir, and planning for the end of your business.

The $170 registration fee includes all workshops, instructional materials, breaks and lunches. Registration for one day is $100. Registration deadline is Feb. 1. After Feb. 1, registration will increase to $200 (both days) and $115 (one day). The course is limited to 150 participants.

Lehigh Valley Winery Wins Top Honors At Farm Show

Clover Hill's Chambourein gained gold medal status as best hybrid, leading to a best of show entry. In addition to their Chambourein, Clover Hill exhibited six other varieties of wine. They were among more than 20 competing wineries at this year's event, where 16 judges sampled 163 varieties of wine, awarding a total of 118 medals.

Established in 1975, Clover Hill was born when John and Pat Skrip took a chance and planted a small vineyard. Success has made Clover Hill an expanding family operation, now realizing four vineyards comprised of 55 acres and their winery business. Emphasis at Clover Hill is in cultivating only the finest quality grapes, and winemaker John Script III said, "We put the same pride, care, and concern in every bottle we make."

Other honors were given to Adams County Winery, gaining a Silver Medal and Best American for their Tears of Gettysburg and Manatawny Creek Winery receiving a gold and Best Vinifera for their Chardonnay. In addition, Naylor Wine Cellars Inc. took home a gold and best show-fruit award with their Peaches Plus. Presque Isle Wine Cellars was awarded a silver medal and best sparkling for their Harbor Creek Red.

Grow Your Own Mesclun

DOWNERS GROVE, Ill. — "Designer greens" are the rage for health-conscious Americans. These leafy mixes known as mesclun are not only low in calories and high in nutrition but also are very tasty.

American mescluns may include lettuces, arugula, endives, mustards, purslane, chicory, cresses, parsleys, fennels, escarole and tender wild greens as well. Bibb, Romaine, oakleaf and crisphead lettuces, the four kinds of lettuce, often are all represented in popular mesclun blends. Lettuces are most common in the milder blends. Piquant, peppery mescluns include such things as sharp arugula, tangy mustards, spicy cresses and zesty chicory.

Mesclun may include varieties of greens that are comparatively unknown to American gardeners.

Some eight to sixteen or more different plants may be used to meet our American tastes. Piquant and milder mixes are two main divisions of mesclun. The National Garden Bureau recommends planting piquant and milder mescluns in separate wide rows, then harvesting separately and mixing in proportions to suit the occasion, the meal and personal taste.

Even edible flowers or their petals — bachelor's buttons, calendulas, chive blossoms, marigolds, nasturtiums and violets—may be part of a mesclun mix. Mesclun seeds are blended to many tastes and appropriately called by such names as spring salad, stir-fry greens, Nicoise, piquant mix, Provencal, garnish mix and so forth. Rarely are seed packets simply labeled "mesclun."

The four types of lettuce are looseleaf, cos (romaine), butterhead and crisphead. Easiest of all to grow are the looseleaf varieties which are the backbone of most mescluns. An old variety that is heat resistant is 'Oakleaf,' a handsome green lettuce with leaves that are distinctly like those of oaks.

• Growing From Seeds, Site Planning and Preparation

Mesclun, like lettuce and its other leafy components, will grow best in soil that is rich, loamy and of good loose structure. Soils should be well draining and with a pH that is slightly acid to neutral.

If the soil is heavy and loaded with clay, plant in slightly raised beds to improve drainage. Salad greens prefer a pH of 6.0 to 6.5. Although some mesclun mixes include greens that are tolerant of heat, most are crops of cool mild weather and will grow in sun to partial shade. When growing mesclun during hot weather, choose a site that is shaded from hot afternoon sun for best results, or use shade cloth to provide shade.

The lettuces and other leafy greens of mesclun are shallow rooted and so will benefit from an inch or so of fine organic fertilizer or compost worked into the top few inches of garden soil before planting. When the seeds have germinated and the true leaves are growing, an additional top or side dressing of finely textured compost or organic fertilizer will encourage vigorous growth.

An area in the vegetable garden is not the only place to grow mesclun — not by a long shot.

Mesclun is not only a nutritious addition to the kitchen garden, it also is a pretty crop and so can be used in ornamental gardens as well. The leaves are in a range of green shades and the textures are varied as well.

The National Garden Bureau notes that mesclun makes a handsome addition to an herb garden either as a border or when broadcast in a well-defined area. Mesclun also grows well in containers, making the leafy blends ideal for patio or terrace plantings in tubs and other containers. Once you have grown mesclun, you will quickly appreciate its ornamental assets — let your imagination be your guide in site selection. Care for this simple but elegant short-lived crop is just as easy in ornamental beds or containers as it is in vegetable gardens.

• Timing To Grow

Mesclun is certainly one of the easiest of all garden crops to grow. Sow the seeds and then begin to harvest the baby leaves in one to five weeks, depending upon the season and the temperature of air and soil. Lettuce and the other leafy greens of mesclun mixes grow swiftly, therefore you should plan to make successive plantings of the seed mixes throughout the growing season.

Generally, if you plant mesclun seed mixes every ten days to two weeks from spring through fall, you will have mesclun for salads and stir-fry dishes all season long.

Seeds will germinate in cool weather, even as low as 40 degrees. Although the lettuces will grow at their best when temperatures are in the 60's, you can get good early growth by providing afternoon shade and constant soil moisture.
